Heavy Winds Delay Ship Rescue

PLYMOUTH, England (AP)—The British ship Londoner reached the crippled 7,184-ton Liberian vessel Tradeways II early today, but reported she was unable to lower lifeboats to help.

The Londoner radioed that because of 35-knot winds, she would wait for daylight before beginning operations. The report said men were sighted on the deck of the stricken Montreal-bound ship and one of the Tradeways' lifeboats was in the water.

The 441-foot Liberian ship radioed Thursday night she was taking water and breaking up 700 miles off Land's End. There was no word of how many men were aboard.

The RAF coastal command here said a plane was ready at Ballykelly, Northern Ireland, to fly to the Tradeways if needed. The freighter, formerly known as the Amilla, was en route from Antwerp, Belgium, to Montreal.

Toward Greek Ship

City Tug Fighting Huge Seas, Gales

A distress message from a Greek freighter has sent the Victoria-based tug Sudbury II off on a rescue mission.

Last given position of the propellerless freighter Ekaterini G. was 2,400 miles west of Cape Flattery, and roughly half way between Adak in the Aleutians and Midway Island.

Huge seas and gale winds were reported by both Sudbury II and an Adak-based navy tug which has a life aboard the freighter and is standing by.

The Sudbury's captain, late Thursday, reported running into a heavy northeast swell and a strong northeast wind slowly increasing.

The Ekaterini G. was on her way to Vancouver in ballast to pick up a load of wheat when high seas lifted her too high too often, and she threw her propeller.

RECORD TOW

World record salvage tow of 3,400 miles was set a few years ago by Island Tug's Sudbury I, after the freighter Makedonia threw her propeller.

Propeller-tossing time in the northern Pacific usually extends through the gale seasons from September to March and an Is-Continued on Page 3

Never Will Be

No Deals Says John D

By BON COLLISTER
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

BROCKVILLE, Ont. — Conservative leader John Diefenbaker bombed and buried persistent speculation that a "deal" on the leadership caused the avalanche of pre-election unity in the party.

"There were no deals," he told a crowd of 1,200 here. "There never will be as long as I am leader of the party."

RESIGNATION

Bert Leboe, Social Credit candidate in Cariboo constituency, said Thursday that Conservative leader Diefenbaker has submitted his resignation, dated July, 1967, to the Conservative party.

"The only reason former Conservative cabinet ministers are returning to the Conservative fold is to get another crack at the leadership," he told a Castor, Alta., audience.

HONEST DIFFERENCES

Talking freely about the troubles that broke up his cabinet early in 1963, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"We were disgusted over the nuclear deal. Honest men have—Continued on Page 3

Nearest Operator in Nanaimo

EMERGENCY MIXUP ANGERS ALBERNIS

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — A frantic mother dialled "O" for operator to call out the inhalator for her one-month-old son, and Nanaimo fire department rushed to answer the call.

The emergency was in Port Alberni.

The baby was dead when it was finally rushed to West Coast General Hospital by the mother, Wednesday night.

Hammer

Dead is Wayne Amade Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Frank, 902 Bruce, Port Alberni.

With direct distance dialing there is no longer a telephone operator in the Albernis.

When Mrs. Frank dialed "O" she didn't realize she was speaking to an operator in Nanaimo.

AFRAID OF THIS

Since there is a Bruce Street in Nanaimo, the operator called out the Nanaimo inhalator.

"Ever since they took the operators out of Port Alberni I've been afraid some emergency like this might come up," said Mayor Les Hammer.

'WE'D BE CUT OFF'

"What would happen if we had another tidal wave, and the lines to Nanaimo were down?" asked the mayor. "We would be completely cut off."

Fire chief Maurice Smith said "We will not know until a post-mortem whether our department could have saved the child, had we known about it."

He said the emergency system in the valley is inadequate.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

"The system here might be all right for a village of 3,000, but it's just not good enough for an area where close to 20,000 are concerned," he said.

Emergency numbers are different in Alberni, Port Alberni, and Cherry Creek.

Copter, Plane Escape Craft

BERNAU, Germany (UPI)—A former Czech air force captain escaped to West Germany Thursday night by helicopter, landing it in a U.S. army recreation area, an army officer said.

U.S. military personnel stared pop-eyed when the refugee put his Czech airplane helicopter down on a parking lot in the army's Chiemsee Lake recreation area near the West German-Austrian border. He identified himself as Jan Nemoec.

Nemoec's escape came almost simultaneously with the flight of a 23-year-old East German aircraft mechanic who stole a collective farm spray-plane in Mecklenburg and flew to Ratzburg in Schleswig-Holstein. He said it was a "miracle" because he had never flown a plane before.

Up-Coast Torrent

Isolated Village Rides Out Flood

KINGCOTE INLET, B.C. (CP)—Late reports are "optimistic" evacuation of this remote logging village hit by flooding may not be necessary.

"We have every reason to believe that flooding is on the wane," Attorney-General Bonner said Thursday night.

"There appears to be no present need for evacuation."

HEAVY RAINS

The Kingcote River, swollen by near torrential rains that hit the coastal region 220 miles northwest of Vancouver, rampaged over its banks at the head of the long inlet.

Muddy water swirled past houses, most built on stilts along the riverbank, and rose above floors.

100 PEOPLE

Mr. Bonner said about 100 persons live in the village.

He said he did not want to rely on sketchy reports and had requested some seaborne craft to remain in the vicinity until dawn "until a complete and proper assessment has been made."

"The difficulty," he said, "is it is a terribly isolated situation. It is not approachable by air at night and can be approached by water only with extreme caution and preferably in daylight."

BARGES NEAR

Two large barges were being towed into the inlet and were expected to be near the community by daylight.

Mr. Bonner said the barges were capable of complete evacuation then if it was necessary.

COULD BE PROBLEM

He said there "could be a problem" if there was a heavy rain overnight.

"An RCMP plane is standing by to pass over the area at first light," he said.

RCMP patrol boats and the Canadian Coast Guard vessel Ready were proceeding to the scene overnight.

'True Revolutionaries'

Castro's Objective: Distill Population

MIAMI (UPI)—Premier Fidel Castro says he is letting Cubans leave the island because he wants to distill Cuba's population to "true revolutionaries, true socialists, true communists."

Castro, in a surprise speech marking Cuba's first national track and field games Thursday, reiterated his "open door" policy for Cuban refugees first proclaimed Sept. 28.

"Again we say that the policy of this government is that anyone who does not wish to live here can leave," said Castro, whose speech was monitored in Miami.

EXPULSION NO ONE

"We are expelling no one, for we expel no one born in this land, but we are giving facilities to all those who do not wish to live here."

"We are doing this because we want to create a society of men and woman who are true revolutionaries, true socialists, true communists," said Castro.

'Old man of sea' arrives in Florida

Biggest Day Yet In Cuban Exodus

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—A parade of small boats pouring out of Cuba brought more than 300 refugees across the gulfstream to freedom today, among them a 6-day-old boy and a wizened "old man of the sea."

It was the heaviest influx on any one day since the do-it-yourself exodus began with the first boat arrival two weeks ago in response to Castro's Sept. 28 announcement of an "Open Door" policy to rid his island of discontented persons.

The weather-beaten 92-year-old, Anselmo Hernandez, claims he was the fisherman who inspired the Pulitzer Prize novel "The Old Man and the Sea," written by the late Ernest Hemingway. Grizzled Anselmo said he met Hemingway 30 years ago, adding they had remained good friends until the author's death.

Refugees told of preparations at Varadero, which has become a refugee embarkation point, for a mass airlift of emigrants.

Dogs and Gas Used on Mob

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Argentine police used tear gas and dogs in clashes with industrial workers who staged a mass walkout in Buenos Aires and its suburbs Thursday. Fights broke out in six places, and gunfire was reported in one area. The strike was in protest against a government clampdown on union political activity.

'Malicious'

Pearson Hits

'Inventions'

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson lashed back Thursday night at Opposition charges of corruption in his government, calling them "malicious inventions."

He said organized crime has made attempts to influence the work of government but "organized crime has failed in those attempts."

The prime minister, speaking on a CBC free-time television broadcast, said one "glaring example" of misrepresentation has been in connection with killings in Quebec by an organized criminal ring.

NO EVIDENCE

"The ring was involved in arson; there is no evidence at all to connect it with bankruptcy cases. Yet you have been told that the killings might have been prevented if a report on bankruptcy received by the federal government had been published."

"There is not a scrap of evidence to support the charge. The alleged report doesn't even exist. It is pure invention. No, not pure invention; malicious invention."

Referring to the Lucien Rivard case, he said it is a serious one that "has worried me more than anything I have ever experienced."

To Rhodesia at Weekend

Wilson Set to Go

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI)

—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson will fly here this weekend in a dramatic attempt to stave off a unilateral declaration of independence by white-ruled Rhodesia.

Wilson offered in London Thursday to fly personally to Salisbury to resume negotiations broken off earlier this month.

Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said after a cabinet meeting this afternoon he would meet with Wilson.

"I will reserve the whole of the coming weekend for our discussion," Smith said.

A few hours later Smith appeared on a nationwide television program and said Britain must make concessions if it does not know.

He said the CBC used it here Wednesday night, and a number of individual TV stations also have used it.

Network Pulls NDP's Plug

TORONTO (CP) — The New Democratic Party complained Thursday the CTV television network and some individual TV stations rejected a 60-second NDP commercial, part of the party's extensive telecasting in the federal general election.

Eamon Park, national NDP president, said at a press conference he considered the network and stations were violating the principle of free speech and that "the affinity of stations to the advertising industry" was a factor in the rejection.

The commercial showed a supposed housewife registering disappointment at the failure of an unidentified product to live up to its TV billing, with an announcer's voice promising an NDP government would protect shoppers.

CTV issued a statement saying the commercial was an indiscriminate and unsupported attack on all TV advertising and was presented in a misleading manner. It would have been rejected if a regular commercial sponsor had submitted it, and the network did not believe sponsorship by a political party justified "relaxation in our standards of responsible advertising practice."

Mr. Park contended the substance of the advertisement was accurate and said its content had been cleared with a Board of Broadcast Governors lawyer before being filmed. However, the NDP did not plan a protest to the BBG.

Manny Dunskey, head of the Montreal advertising firm that produced it, conceded the stations had the right to reject any advertising material.

He said the CBC used it here Wednesday night, and a number of individual TV stations also have used it.

Smith Accepts Plan For Visit by Wilson

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Rhodesia Thursday accepted a proposal by British Prime Minister Wilson to fly here for new talks on the issue of the colony's independence.

But Prime Minister Ian Smith said this did not mean "a complete reopening of negotiations."

The Rhodesian leader made the statement in a nationwide radio-television broadcast shortly after he had announced acceptance of Wilson's proposal that he fly to Rhodesia for new talks on the issue.

Smith described Wilson's proposed visit as "an honest and genuine attempt to solve our problem."

Asked later by reporters if Wilson would be allowed to see restricted persons during his visit to Rhodesia if he wanted to confer with them as well, Smith replied: "Certainly. We have nothing to hide. He may see anyone he wishes."

Land Tug and Barge spokesman said Thursday this could be a busy season for the Sudbury.

RENDZVOUS TIME
Rendezvous time is expected Monday, but depends on weather conditions.

Island Tug officials reckon the Sudbury II, with Capt. Adrian Bull in command, will have to tow the disabled freighter better than 2,200 miles if the rendezvous plans hold good.

Clubfoot Treatment Improved But Correction Time Lengthy

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a clubfoot? I realize it can be corrected, but has there been any improvement in the method in the last 25 years? How long is the process? Our new baby has a clubfoot.—MRS. A. Y.

There are several theories as to causes of clubfoot, and they all may be correct. There may be further causes that we don't know yet. Whether, in any given case, you can say, "This was the cause," is doubtful.

Here are four probable causes.

First: Heredity. There are parents, quite normal themselves, who have one or more children with clubfoot. Perhaps the tendency was present, but not very strongly, in the families of both parents. But the combination—well, we can trace hereditary characteristics quite clearly in creatures of brief lives and rapid procreation, like mice, flies and guinea pigs. It isn't that easy with people.

Second: The foot gets tangled in the umbilical cord and is held in a cramped-out-of-normal shape. This might, I dare say, have some hereditary elements.

It isn't always easy to be sure whether a new baby has a clubfoot. The odd foot positions and actions of an infant can be suspicious at times when, in reality, everything is normal enough. When the foot is turned inward, it can be especially deceptive.

Yes, indeed, treatment has been improved in the last 25 years. So has just about everything from taking out tonsils to heart surgery.

The improvements may not have been dramatic, but the results have been encouraging. The old methods of severing tendons or cutting foot joint capsules have been abandoned because they proved unsuccessful.

Johnson Goes Home

He will leave shortly for further recuperation elsewhere — presumably at his Texas ranch.

They do, the resign from cabinet.

This, he recalled, had happened in the United Kingdom and in the cabinet of Mackenzie King over conscription.

UNITED TODAY
"Today we are united," he continued, "and the Liberals didn't expect that to happen. Now they say there must have been a deal. There wasn't."

All he had done was to hold out the welcome mat to all those who found it necessary "to separate themselves in part or in whole" from his leadership.

CABINET MATERIAL
The Conservative party, he said, now has the men to form a government, and he listed many ex-cabinet ministers who are running again, including former external affairs minister Howard Green, public works minister Fulton and trade minister Hees.

"We are in a position to form a government with backbone," he said, "and that's something the present government hasn't got."

BENDS WITH WIND
When he goes out shooting, and as he watches the reeds bending in the winds, "my mind naturally turns to the present government, which bends with the wind."

In a swipe at Prime Minister Pearson, Mr. Diefenbaker said he was not the kind of man who made one speech in one part of the country, and another, in another.

ELECTION POLLS
He criticized the usefulness of election polls and recalled that his greatest job in 1957 was to convince Tories that they were going to win the election.

Two days before that election, the Gallup poll gave 34 per cent to the Tories and 48 per cent to the Liberals. "Now," he said, "we are in the midst of a campaign which can't be measured in the ordinary manner in which polls are taken."

The Liberal government, he said, would stand so long as it finds it necessary to stand without opposition.

"When I look at those ministers with their powers of resilience in principle, I am reminded of the cushion that bears the shape of the last person who sat on it."

STRONG CANADA
The Conservative party, he said, was pledged to a strong Canada.

"We want to heal the wounds of the past two and a half years."

He accused the government of fooling the people over and over again.

GREATEST PROSPERITY
In 1962, the Liberals had claimed that devaluation of the dollar meant bankruptcy for Canada.

But it has led to the greatest prosperity for trade and tourism that Canada had ever known.

The Liberals, he added, had opposed wheat sales to Communist countries, but now they do it, too.

CLAIM PATERNITY
They had treated the wheat sales as an "illegitimate child" of the Diefenbaker years, but now they claimed paternity.

"They have fooled you, make no bones about it," he told the crowd. "Now they say 'that's all over' and Mr. Pearson says, 'don't look back.'"

Britain Hoping U.S., Reds Can Close Gap

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—Britain said Thursday it could "see no reason why" it was not possible to reconcile the draft treaties banning the spread of nuclear arms proposed by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Britain's chief disarmament negotiator Lord Chalfont held out the hope that a compromise treaty could be signed at this session of the General Assembly.

EVERY EFFORT

He said East and West "must strain every nerve here in this building to close the gap in thinking that separate the American and Soviet draft treaties" and then present as soon as possible "a treaty for signature."

Lord Chalfont's statement in the General Assembly's 117-nation main political committee went one step further than the United States which had said it was "encouraged" by Soviet indications it was willing to negotiate a non-proliferation treaty.

REDS GENUINE

Stating a belief that the Soviet draft was not intended to exclude existing arrangements for sharing strategic responsibilities in NATO, Lord Chalfont declared "I believe the Soviet Union genuinely wants agreement."

U.S. disarmament expert William F. Foster, in noting the Soviet proposal, urged that the 18-nation disarmament conference be reconvened in Geneva as soon as possible to consider the East-West drafts.

PERFECT SPOT

Lord Chalfont said the United Nations appeared to be in the perfect spot to reach agreement on the nuclear disarmament proposal.

"If we can reconcile the main differences that exist between the two draft treaties now on the table before us—and I see no reason why we should not—then I believe it would be accepted by a large number of the countries represented around this table," he said.

Killing Recalled By Informer

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (UPI)—A cockley red-haired FBI informer told a toothpick chewing, soft-drink sipping jury Thursday that he saw a young Ku Klux Klansman kill Mrs.

Klansmen Linked To Burnings

WASHINGTON (UPI)—House investigators Thursday linked two Ku Klux Klan leaders with a "series of bombings," cross burnings, and physical harassment.

Chairman Edwin Willis, D-I.A., of the House Committee on Un-American Activities charged Marshal Kornegay, leader of the Virginia Klan and a former North Carolina Klan official, with harassing opponents of the hooded secret society.

Kornegay and James Robertson Jones, Klan grand dragon in North Carolina, invoked the fifth amendment throughout the daylong hearing. They used the constitutional guarantee against self-incrimination more than 250 times.

Viet Cong Reopen Vigorous Attack

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist Viet Cong firing broke out with renewed vigor today at an American special forces camp in the central highlands that had been under a furious Communist siege for three days. Fighting continued into the fourth day.

The Communists used small arms, machine guns and mortars in resuming the attack after a rescue force of Vietnamese rangers and U.S. advisers dropped by helicopter Thursday to relieve the camp. But a military spokesman said the Viet Cong grip on the area had loosened enough to allow the camp to send out several reconnaissance patrols. There was a possibility that the Communists were moving more strength into the jungle area.

NAPALM DROPPED

The air strike was directed by air force Capt. Richard Shortridge of Joseph, Ore. The air force fighter-bombers dropped flaming napalm on the Communists as they drove into the barbed-wire entanglement protecting the camp's outer perimeter.

National Issues Second

VANCOUVER (CP)—Arthur Laing, Minister of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources, Wednesday night charged former external affairs minister Howard Green with making "the most irresponsible statement in Canadian history by a member of the Conservative party."

In a speech at a meeting for Vancouver Centre Social Credit candidate William McIntyre, Mr. Bonner said British Columbian "should always be sympathetic to the problems of every other region. "But we should consider our own region first," he said.

"Too many elected representatives from B.C. get caught up in the problems of the Ottawa Valley." He said the old-line parties have proven themselves incapable of handling many situations, such as the shortage of transportation for wheat sold to China.

"There was all this wheat, and there were the ships out in Vancouver harbor, and the national railways said they couldn't find cars for wheat—or cars for people, for that matter," he said.

Green's Statement 'Irresponsible'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Arthur Laing, Minister of Northern Affairs and Natural Resources, Wednesday night charged former external affairs minister Howard Green with making "the most irresponsible statement in Canadian history by a member of the Conservative party."

He was commenting on a promise by Mr. Green, Vancouver-Quadrant Conservative candidate that a Conservative government would introduce Canada's history by a member of the Conservative party."

Anglican Primate Tees Off At Church Journal Story

WINNIPEG (CP)—Archbishop H. H. Clark, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, said Wednesday he was disturbed and bewildered by an editorial appearing in an Anglican publication—The Rupert's Land News.

The diocesan newspaper, in its October issue, says that vital information relating to the proposed union of the Anglican Church and the United Church of Canada "has remained hidden from the view of the average Anglican."

Archbishop Clark made his comments during the official charge to the 57th synod of Rupert's Land which concludes today.

He told delegates there are dangers in an arrangement in which a diocesan newspaper does not reflect official church thinking.

"Readers do not make these nice distinctions between the editor's views and the considered judgment of the church as expressed, for example, by the synod," the archbishop said.

"This places a great responsibility upon the editor."

Probe into Phones

THE B.C. TELEPHONE COMPANY next week in Vancouver is to undergo examination at public hearings of the Board of Transport Commissioners.

What happens at these hearings will eventually be of great importance not only to B.C. Telephone, but also to everyone who uses its services.

A similar hearing into the affairs of Bell Telephone was held earlier this year in the east by the commissioners.

The purpose of the hearings, it is carefully pointed out, is not to change the existing rate structure, although it is admitted by the telephone company that the findings of the board might eventually lead to such change applications.

What the board wants to know more about is the way in which the company is comporting itself, its need for new capital, its handling of revenues and expenses, and its level of permissive earnings.

The board must know these things; it must check that the B.C. Telephone is using its money wisely and well; that it is providing the province with the type of service which it requires; and finally it must make sure that telephone rates are reasonable and not boosted by inefficient operation or other wastefulness.

Only when it is satisfied that these things are being done can the board truthfully say that it is doing its job and that the monopoly enjoyed by B.C. Telephone is not being abused.

The public hearings are perhaps overdue, for the last sittings of this kind took place in 1958, and since then British Columbia, its population and its economics have changed vastly.

It is pleasing to note that public and other users of the B.C. Telephone Company have indicated their intention of taking part in the hearings. They include the B.C. government, the Union of B.C. Municipalities, the City of Vancouver, the B.C. Federation of Labor, the leader of the opposition in the provincial House, as well as many others, who will be no doubt carefully on the alert to ensure that the telephone company is checked on all its submissions.

There is at the moment no active move to have B.C. Telephone brought out of private ownership, although there are many who feel that it should eventually be taken over by the Crown as was the old B.C. Electric. Among those attending the hearings will be some with those views, and it is clearly up to the telephone company to prove that it is not only doing the best possible job, but is also doing it at a price which is not out of line with those of other comparable telephone organizations on the North American continent.

Half-Way On

THE RED FEATHER campaign is approaching the half-way mark towards its goal of $439,210 with which to provide the needed sustenance for the varied welfare and community agencies that make up the Community Chest. That means there is still some way to go.

Undoubtedly the current federal election has intruded to impede the normal momentum and interest usually associated with the United Appeal, because of the focus of the public eye on the election campaign. Community interest has been diverted and the coincidence of this clash on the claims of individual attention has not been to the advantage of the Red Feather campaign.

It is not to be thought, however, that the local community will fail in its response to the United Appeal. Past records show that generosity and a willingness to help others who are in need of the valuable services which the combined agencies of the Chest provide is a basic characteristic of the people of this area.

Local citizens do not need to be reminded therefore of the obligations which they have always assumed with a readiness that does them credit.

This comment is to take note of the progress being made by officials and canvassers of the Red Feather organization, and record the fact that the half-way point has almost been reached. There is as said above some way still to go, but the experience of former years serves to support the belief that when the campaign is over the objective will have been reached or very nearly so.

That is the desirable aim which Victoria and its environs should accomplish if the theme of giving generously is matched this year as it has been in the past.

U.K. and the ECM

ALTHOUGH BRITAIN'S Conservative party leader, Mr. Edward Heath, says it is not a new manifesto, his recently published policy statement will be considered a blueprint for action in the future.

The policy pamphlet speaks with renewed emphasis of the Conservatives' determination to take the country into the European economic community whenever the opportunity offers; but it says nothing about the kind of Europe in which it wants Britain to be integrated or the degree of supranationalism considered appropriate.

Unexpectedly, Mr. Heath has won support for his policy from quarters which normally deny it.

The Sun newspaper in London, well to the left of centre, says: "He promises to seize the first opportunity to take Britain into the (European) Common Market—a significant shift from the chilly attitude of the Tories at the last election. Now two parties, Liberals and Tories, are firmly committed to the Common Market. Will this make the (Labor) government think again?"

None of the British commentators, pro or con, discusses the possible effect of implementation of this policy upon trade within the Commonwealth.

This is quite natural. Britain's concern at this time, with overseas military commitments which would stagger wealthier nations, and with economic problems admittedly critical, is first of all with her own future.

If membership in the European Common Market is considered a help towards a solution of her difficulties, her Commonwealth partners must accept it—whether they like it or not.

Indeed, in the long run, it may be that such a step would be of benefit to all of us; for with stability in her economy Britain would continue to be a good partner, a strong ally and a continuing customer.

"Won't you join me for tea with the Tories, lunch with the Liberals and a nightcap with the NDP, Cecil?"

Guerrillas War on Portuguese

African Forces Consolidate

By MALCOLM PAYNE from Dar es Salaam, Tanzania

SECRET PLANS to co-ordinate the military activities of the nationalist movements in the Portuguese colonies have been made here.

Leaders of the "freedom fighters" met behind closed doors recently at the second Conference of the Nationalist Organizations of the Portuguese Colonies (CONCP).

The head of CONCP, Mario del Andrade, president of the Mozambique Liberation Front (Frelimo), Dr. Eduardo Mondlane, president of the People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola, and Agostinho Neto, were the top men at the meeting, flanked by members of the political and action committees.

Also present was Gaston Soumaliot, president of the Supreme Council of the Revolution of Congo. The rebel leader recently visited Russia, Red China and Cuba.

Just what plans were agreed on to step up the guerrilla struggle in Guinea, Angola and Mozambique were a closely guarded secret. It can be assumed at present, however, that the struggle will remain of the hit-and-hide nature for some time to come.

The meeting coincided with the first anniversary of the military rebellion in Mozambique, the territory on the southern border of Tanzania. The event was celebrated in Dar es Salaam, the headquarters of Frelimo, on Mondlane's return from Sweden.

At the conference Mondlane attacked the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — of which Portugal is a member — and commercial interests in New York, Bonn, London and Paris who were giving "moral and spiritual aid" to the Portuguese.

But during a later interview at his bungalow home in fashionable Oyster Bay here — a home surrounded by a high, chain-link and barbed wire fence — Mondlane told me most of his financial aid from outside of Africa has come from such Western countries as the United States, Britain and Canada.

About 70 per cent of his annual budget comes from the African Liberation Committee.

an organization of nine African states.

"Our money comes from organizations interested in seeing Mozambique free," Mondlane told me. "We get material aid (arms) mostly from the Eastern nations: China, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Indonesia."

How the fighters in Mozambique are supplied is not officially known but Chinese and other arms ships are not an infrequent sight in the harbor here. Whether any of the equipment is for Frelimo can only be the subject of inspired guesswork.

The Portuguese have a string of small military posts along the 600 miles of the border with Tanzania, manned usually by from 100 to 400 soldiers. Crossing the border is not difficult and the usual system of communication used by Frelimo is the runner.

Mondlane estimates there are 2,000 men fighting the Portuguese army of some 35,000 in the jungle and bush of Mozambique. Frelimo claims 1,000 soldiers were killed and several planes shot down in its first year of military activity.

The Frelimo bands are small — their exact size Mondlane will not reveal, as he will not reveal the amount of his annual budget, because figures would assist the Portuguese — but they have grown in number since the fighting began.

The men are not controlled militarily from Frelimo headquarters in Dar es Salaam entirely; there is a local chain of command in Mozambique.

Mondlane said in the interview that few members of the organization know the exact whereabouts of the guerrillas. Each band works individually under a central command but without knowing where the next group of men is.

They carry any arms which can be easily transported through the thick jungle — again Mondlane was reluctant to detail the weapons but it can be assumed that modern automatic weapons, small mortars and any gun which can be broken up for easy movement will be used.

The Portuguese figure of casualties is much less — when figures are revealed which is very infrequently — and Mondlane admits that his party's claim may be incorrect.

"We estimate from those who drop," he said.

His own losses he puts at 10 with about five captured. At least two of the latter, he says, were tortured to death.

Initially Frelimo men were trained in Algeria after consultations with the now-deposed President Ahmed Ben Bella and the present head of state, Col. Houari Boumedienne. These men later carried out training programs for Frelimo members in Tanzania and Mozambique.

"We no longer train people in Tanzania. It is much more practical to train them at home," Mondlane said.

He denied reports that men were trained in Communist Cuba because it is so far away from Africa but added that "we have great respect for Fidel Castro and Che Guevara." Guevara, a guerrilla expert, vanished from Cuba many months ago.

Mondlane, who appears non-aligned in his thinking, said he welcomed aid from any source, Communist or capitalist.

Frelimo was formed on June 25, 1962, as a merger of other parties. Leaders adopted a three-point program calling for organization of guerrilla units, securing military supplies for a regular army and establishment of an educational program. The school was started in Dar es Salaam, where a secondary school was built with a $100,000 donation from the Ford Foundation.

Aid from the United States is not surprising, Mondlane is hardly a stranger there. Brought up in the Mozambique bush by a polygamist father, he went to the capital, Lourenco Marques, at the age of 16 before going on to school in South Africa.

He attended Witwatersrand University in Johannesburg in 1948 but was expelled the following year for "being a foreign native." He obtained a scholarship through a U.S. trust to Lisdon University and was there for 18 months along with other present nationalist leaders, Neto and Andrade.

He left "because there was a political slant there even in teaching anthropology" and went to Oberlin College, Cleveland, Ohio. He obtained his doctor's degree at Northwestern University, Chicago, in social sciences.

It was there he met his wife, Janet Johnson, the daughter of parents of Swedish extraction who now live in Indianapolis. The Mondlanes have three children at school here.

Mondlane took special studies at Harvard before joining the United Nations Trusteeship Council as a staff member. In 1961 he went home to Mozambique for a holiday. Before going he went back to New York to hand in his resignation.

"During my visit ideas became fixed in my mind. I went to see what had happened in the 10 years I had been away. I found misery among the Africans. The European community had prospered while the African was poorer and felt exploited. I decided to organize force against the Portuguese," Mondlane said.

"At that time Tanganyika was not free from British rule, but I had met President Julius Nyerere when he came to address the Trusteeship Council. When Tanganyika became independent I wrote to Nyerere and came here six months later. In the interval I taught at the University of Syracuse."

Mondlane, 45, who is more than six feet tall and heavily built, said he believed the Portuguese would be forced out of Mozambique in four years.

Frelimo will increase its men in the field as quickly as possible and this continuous harassing may have the desired effect. Portugal is fighting on three fronts in Africa and this is a costly business.

A lot depends on how highly on her list of priorities Portugal places this colony on the East African coast and also on the success of international pressure in the United Nations.

One of many. It seems to me that before the election there should be some public discussion on the matter of our new flag. Many people, as you know, are most unhappy about our new emblem. I amongst them, and for the following reasons:

It has no historic significance. It is not in any way artistic, and a red maple leaf is a leaf on the point of death. Surely an extraordinary emblem for a growing, dynamic society.

It seems to me the solution of the flag problem is quite simple. Let us superimpose a gold fleur-de-lis in the centre of the Jack and thereby recognize the French contribution to the development of Canada.

Our flag will then have historical significance. The three crosses and the fleur-de-lis will represent the four major races concerned in our original development.

Pressures Grow

Japanese Islands Still 'Alien' Soil

By STUART GRIFFIN from Tokyo

TWENTY years after Japan's statesmen, admirals and generals surrendered to General Douglas MacArthur on the USS Missouri's quarterdeck, the problem of the territories Japan lost as a result of the Pacific War still remains unsolved.

A reminder came recently when rioting left-wing Okinawans kept Japan's Prime Minister Eisaku Sato from his hotel, and compelled him to spend the night instead in an American military guest-house — on the Ryukyus' main island that the U.S. still occupies under provisions of the San Francisco Peace Treaty.

Japan's post-war generation is apt to think the homeland consists only of the four main islands of Hokkaido, Honshu, Shikoku and Kyushu, and the myriad of small islands and islets, most of them uninhabited, some uninhabitable, in adjacent waters. Only the left-wing Socialist and Communist parties and the left-leaning Japanese trade unions remind fellow-Japanese that Okinawa belongs to Japan residually, whenever the threat of communism vanishes from the Pacific.

The leftist elements ceaselessly trumpet for a return of Okinawa to Honshu — the mainland of Japan — and argue that the U.S. should get out after terminating its military rule there, and dismantle its vast base complex.

They make no such demands of the U.S.S.R., which still occupies other war-lost territory — the Kuriles and Saghalien (Karafuto).

There has now appeared what is called the "Northern Territories Recovery Movement." Year by year till now ineffectual knots of former Kurile and Saghalien islanders mounted feeble campaigns to get the "Northern Territories" back under Japan's sovereignty. There were rallies before the prime minister's official residence, the Diet, and the ministry of foreign affairs. But there were no marches up the steep Mamlancho — "Badger's Hole Hill" — to protest to the last territories' overlords in the Soviet Embassy. This may come, however, as part of plans for holding a "Northern Territories Recovery Week."

Only scholars really recall that 20 years ago Japan, in accepting the Potsdam Declaration, ended the first lost war in its lengthy national history. In bowing to the conquering Allies' demands, Japan also agreed to renounce Korea, its colony for 35 years; the territories seized in Manchuria and Mongolia, Formosa and the Pescadores; the Pacific islands such as the Marshalls, Gilberts and Carolines that Japan took over after the 1914-18 war, and what the Cairo Declaration of November, 1943, had termed "other regions seized by Japan . . . by violence or avarice."

This Cairo Declaration was the basis for the San Francisco Peace Treaty of April 28, 1952. Article 3 of that treaty stipulated that the U.S. assume sovereignty over the Ryukyus and the Bonin (Ogasawara) island groups, "pending arrangements to place them under UN trusteeship."

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, claiming that "as history shows, the Ryukyus and Bonins alike are historically Japanese," set the stage for the later Kennedy decision to regard both as "residually Japanese territory," both, however, to remain in U.S. hands "until the period of tension and anxiety . . . the threat of aggression comes to an end in the Far East."

Ironically the Ryukyus were originally settled by mainland Chinese and were called the Loochow Islands. No less ironically the Bonins were first discovered by New England whaling boatmen, and settled by men with such names as Savory, Robertson and Harper.

Okinawa is, of course, America's largest forward base, staging area, supply depot, harbor and training grounds in the Pacific. From it — and this has aroused the recent outcry from Japan — have flown B-52 jet bombers bent on flushing the Viet Cong from jungle hideouts, and also U.S. marines and army special forces, trained in Okinawa's mountain jungle, to carry the escalated war to the Communists in Southeast Asia.

The Bonins house submarine forces and are heavily fortified. They are armed auxiliaries to Okinawa's might.

After the Second World War the island chains functioned as "fire lookouts" to guard against possibly resurgent diehard Japanese jingoism. But they changed drastically during the 1950-53 Korean War and became strategically important military bases, offshore units to contain the mousing Chinese Communist threat. They have been fleshed up tremendously since war spread in Viet Nam.

Japan's only war-lost territory returned to date has been the Amami-Oshima Island group, some 200 miles southwest of Kagoshima prefecture, of which they were historically a part. That took place in December, 1953, and was intended to forestall a situation of rampant Communist development in a traditionally impoverished area.

Since Russia did not sign the San Francisco Peace Treaty the Kuriles and Saghalien remain in Soviet hands under Potsdam Declaration terms. Moscow policy is to hold its post-war gains until the U.S. disposes its own farther south. But this is something not likely to take place as long as China poses a threat to the free world in the Pacific.

In East Africa

Germans Return

From a Special Correspondent in Malindi, Kenya Coast

Germans are pouring into East Africa, where they were empire-builders before the First World War. But they are coming not to Tanganyika, which was their colony, but to neighboring Kenya, as tourists. In chartered aircraft on cut-price package tours that have the international airlines worried.

The major airline operators are tied to an "economy" return fare between Nairobi and European cities of £20 and upwards. The German and Swiss package tourists (known as "pax" in the trade) pay just over £100 for a fortnight's holiday, of which only £40 is for the return fare.

For a total expenditure of £115 tourists can fly from Zurich to Nairobi, drive by road to the Indian Ocean resort of Malindi, north of Mombasa, and spend 10 days there — enjoying an all-the-year-round season, where the surf is always warm and where there is big game fishing at a fraction of the cost of such sport in the Mediterranean or Caribbean, plus the extra attractions of Africa's wild life and tribal villages.

German tourist companies have found the package tours selling well as a fashionable alternative to the south of France or the Costa Brava for middle-income holidaymakers. It is turning Malindi, hitherto a sleepy little Arab settlement, into a boom town. Three of the four hotels have switched over to Continental Europeans, with notices in German all over the place and German dishes prominent on their menus.

The airline operators, conscious of the shrinking custom which they must share, naturally watch the descent of the £100-a-fortnight tourists at Nairobi in Britannia and other leisurely prop-jets, with some concern. But this is not the only competition and not the only German competition in prospect.

Germany's own international airline, Lufthansa, is to open its new service between Frankfurt and Nairobi early next year.

Today In History

By The Canadian Press

A band of Iroquois Indians attacked the reign of terror of Vercheres 273 years ago today — 1692 — when the owner and his wife were away. Their 14-year-old daughter, Marie-Madeleine, assumed command of the fort and defended it for more than a week, with a garrison of her two younger brothers, two soldiers, and an 80-year-old servant, until help arrived. Marie-Madeleine was distinguished in later life for engaging in a large number of lawsuits.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today — in 1940 — HMCS Margaree, the replacement for HMCS Fraser, was rammed on her first Atlantic convoy and sank with the loss of 112 of the crew of 176. Hilder and Vice-Premier Laval of France conferred at Vichy. Gen. Maxime Weysand arrived at Fez, French Morocco, on behalf of the Vichy government.

U.S. Desperate for Clean Water

Conflicting political statements regarding possible sale of Canadian water to the United States has made this an important issue in the current election campaign. The following article shows how desperate the U.S. is for fresh water supplies.

By BEM PRICE

Water is indestructible. Presumably there is exactly as much water on earth today as at the time of creation.

It is not the total amount of water that concerns mankind, however: It is the quality of the water and its availability for human use.

And herein lies the crux of what is now recognized as the U.S. water problem.

● The available supply of good water is so limited that within 35 years demand will outstrip supply by 350,000,000 gallons daily.

● The water in the 90 major U.S. river basins is being polluted by municipal, industrial and agricultural wastes.

The work of improving the water quality of just 17 of these streams has cost nearly $3,100,000,000 since the program began in 1957.

The fact that American waters are being polluted is, in itself, probably no surprise to anyone, but pollution is a variable, depending for definition upon the intended use of the water.

For domestic use water must be clean, free of disease organisms, bad waste and odor. It must not have a dissolved mineral content higher than 500 parts in 1,000,000 by U.S. Public Health Service standards.

Water for agriculture is judged on mineral content, particularly its sodium level.

Water for fish propagation must be relatively free of industrial and municipal wastes and be able to sustain a flora for the small organisms which serve as fish foods. It also must have a minimum dissolved oxygen content of at least four percent.

Water for industrial use runs the gamut from complete absence of minerals to temperature, the critical factor where water is used for cooling.

There is a widespread assumption that U.S. waters are being polluted chiefly by municipalities, which dump raw sewage into lakes, rivers and streams.

This is true only in part. One of the worst offenders is industry.

The staff report by a special sub-committee of the U.S. Senate committee on public works found: "At the present level of industrial waste treatment, in 1970 the amount of organic industrial wastes discharged will be the equivalent of the raw sewage that could be discharged by the entire population of the United States in that year."

By 1970, the United States is expected to have a population of 210,000,000. The committee staff estimated U.S. industries need to build 6,000 waste treatment plants, beginning now.

The Senate sub-committee reported that there now are 7,939 municipalities with waste treatment plants which serve the needs of 102,000,000 people. Many of these plants, however, are obsolescent.

Some 6,140 municipalities have underway waste treatment projects costing $31,100,000,000. The ultimate bill for clean U.S. water may run as high as $40,000,000,000.

Industry is the big headache. The service says that until it knows what industry is putting into the waters, it has no idea how to go about cleaning them up, and industry is hesitant to tell.

Richard S. Greene, chief of the service's basic data branch, says that with some exceptions industrialists have refused to provide information on the quality and quantity of liquid wastes.

But water pollution is not the only problem. In the arid and semi-arid regions of the west, water collected underground over thousands of years is being pumped out much faster than it is being replaced, raising the spectre of great areas returning to desert.

Deer Valley, an 80-square-mile area north of Phoenix, Ariz., already has returned to desert, its ground water exhausted.

The pumping of ground waters has caused parts of the Imperial Valley in California to subside. On Long Island, N.Y., salt water is intruding into the drained reservoirs.

The U.S. now uses about 360,000,000,000 gallons of water a day. The Senate public works sub-committee estimates it will need 515,000,000,000 gallons within 15 years and "the most the nation can ever hope to achieve as a result of engineering works is about 650,000,000,000 gallons a day."

At the present rate of growth, the sub-committee estimated the U.S. will need more than 1,000,000,000,000 gallons daily by the year 2,000. This means, the committee said that the U.S. will have to use and re-use its available waters, hence the concern with pollution.

Any water, no matter how polluted can be made re-usable—at a price. When people talk of converting sea water to fresh water, or of re-using waste waters, they are talking economics primarily.

Water re-used means scientists must learn a great deal more about water than they now know.

Only 34,200,000 is spent annually on water research, but the U.S. is spending about 3,600 times that much on defence and space research.

NORAD Caves Ready by Jan. 1

By FRANK MACMURBER

The North American Air Defence Command will go underground Jan. 1.

That is the date when the intricate system designed to warn the United States and Canada of approaching enemy missiles or bombers will be moved into the man-made caves in Cheyenne Mountain, only a few miles from NORAD's present above-ground command operations centre at Ent Air Force base, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The new NORAD command post will be protected from enemy air attack by more than 2,000 feet of solid granite above it.

The Cheyenne caves will become the home of more than 450 NORAD personnel. A small city has been built in the caverns so they may live normal lives in their underground home. If attack should come, a huge steel door would swing into place at the mouth of the caverns and life would go on inside.

The caverns are being stocked with food, water and other items to make this underground community self-sufficient for months. There is ample housing for NORAD personnel, too.

Eleven steel buildings, most of them three stories high, have been built in the caverns, which took four and a half years to hew out of the solid rock of Cheyenne Mountain.

They are mounted on huge steel springs to protect sensitive electronic equipment from nuclear blast damage.

The buildings house the equipment to receive, process and display information on the air and space traffic picture over North America.

It is from this control centre that America would get its first warning of an enemy air or space attack.

NORAD's fleet of interceptors, fighters and missiles will remain on the alert at Ent Air Force base, ready to go aloft at the first hint of an enemy assault on the United States or Canada.

Political Unity for Central America?

Trade Knits Nations

By HAROLD Y. JONES From Guatemala City

Central America, a grouping of five small nations which has had neighborhood troubles off and on for more than 100 years, is considering unity as a republic.

Foreign ministers of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica have scheduled a meeting later this month to discuss a proposed charter of the Central American community.

Proposals for political unity have been bouncing around here since Central America gained independence from Mexico in 1823. The five countries did manage to set up a confederation after independence but it collapsed in 1839.

Several times since then, leaders of one or another of the countries have tried to revive the union but with small success. Mere politics was not enough to glue them together.

But political experts here figure political unity has a better chance of succeeding today than ever before. Why? The powerful force of mutually profitable trade may succeed where politics has failed.

The five Central American nations, which together cover about 181,000 square miles, formed a successful Central American Common Market nearly five years ago.

As trade among them increases, the trappings of political individuality—tight immigration laws and red tape that hinder travel and business deals—become greater nuisances.

So now the voice of unity is once again heard in the land. At a meeting in San Salvador last month representatives of each nation drew up a charter that, if approved, would unite them in a federal system.

It calls for a congress, a permanent executive committee and a Central American court of justice.

The congress would consist of five representatives from each state chosen for a four-year term. It would begin annual sessions on Sept. 15, which is independence day in each Central American republic.

The charter also calls for free immigration between countries, with citizens of one country having equal rights in other countries, including freedom of work and exercise of the liberal professions.

It would unify diplomatic representation abroad and empower the confederation to vote as one nation in international organizations and issue one Central American passport for citizens in five nations.

If the foreign ministers approve the charter, it would have to be signed by the presidents of each country and then ratified by the congresses or people of each country.

No one is making any predictions, but the advocates of unity hope that the quickening economic activity in Central America will result in the unity Central Americans have sought since independence.

Education Balance Desirable

By REX C. MACK

Many students in high school, college and even grade school lean heavily toward either mathematics and science, or such things as English, history and literature. It is probably quite a natural tendency in that some students are better in the sciences while others do better in such things as English.

Now, however, because the tendency exists, perhaps it is often nurtured to the point where either science or the study of language and communications is almost idolized while the other group of subjects is almost despised.

The student who adopts such an outlook on education is making an error which will probably cost him dearly throughout his entire life.

People can, I suppose, get along in this world without knowing anything about science, and scientists can also get along even though many of them speak and write very ineffectively. But both sides would undoubtedly be a lot better off if they knew more about the specialty of the other side.

It is unequivocally true that the sales of an organization depend critically on the clarity of the technical information presented to the customer. It will not suffice to be technically superior if the customer cannot understand what you are saying. If he doesn't understand, how could he possibly evaluate who is technically superior?

Moreover, the efficiency of a large technical organization is clearly reduced because so many of the technical people simply cannot communicate properly. Reports must often be re-written several times before they are even acceptable, and they frequently never reach the point of being good.

You can rest assured that given two people who have equivalent technical capability, and the other normal attributes, the one who can speak and write effectively will soon move ahead of the other one.

There is just no getting around it. Some sort of a balance in the educational process is highly desirable. It is perfectly natural to like, and to specialize, in one area of endeavor. But it is very decidedly helpful to maintain, or establish, a reasonable degree of capability in areas of endeavor over and beyond a chosen specialty.

Young Father Found Guilty

A young father of four and leading seaman in the navy was found guilty in central magistrate's court Thursday of assault causing bodily harm to his three-year-old son.

Defence had argued that Edward Fullaway, 640 Belton, exercised a parent's right to choose "punishment" to fit the crime but had not realized or intended its severity.

TO BE PROTECTED

Magistrate William Ostler replied that children had to be protected against the force Fullaway obviously used and remanded him to Oct. 29 for sentence.

Fullaway admitted hitting his son Robert with a stick for misbehaving.

EXTENSIVE BRUISING

Court was told the boy had extensive bruising to the arms, back, buttock and thighs. It was inflicted while Fullaway's wife was in hospital having their fourth child.

Lawyer Robert Price said because he caused bruising did not mean a parent had exceeded proper correction for one of his children.

NO INTENT

He conceded the punishment in this case may have been unreasonable, but said there was no intention of it being excessive.

Magistrate Ostler said he did not think it had to be shown the father intended to be unreasonable in meting out punishment. "It is enough that he administered a severe beating to a three-year-old child."

He added nevertheless that apart from this incident, he was satisfied Fullaway was a good father and husband and a man of good character and reputation.

FOUR ACCUSED

Dr. E. L. McNiven told a preliminary hearing how he subjected a 21-year-old Seattle woman to a search and found $27 wrapped in tissue paper concealed on the woman's body.

The woman, Shirley Lalonde, is accused along with three men, Sidney Travers, Russell Bowcott and Steve Remington, of theft of about $170 and cheques from a safe at Clark and Cordick's store, 2503 Douglas, Sept. 8 or 9.

Strike Over At Chateau

MONTREAL (CP) — Three-year agreement was signed Thursday, ending the six-week strike at the Chateau Frontenac Hotel in Quebec City.

A spokesman for the Canadian Pacific Railway, owners of the hotel, said the hotel is expected to be open to the public by No. 1.

They are also each charged with theft of over $50 of the stolen money.

PARTICLES FOUND

Vancouver analyst E. J. Fonnell testified he later discovered in shoes worn by Remington cement-like particles similar to insulating material used in the rifled safe.

Court heard that the safe was removed from an office, broken open and left lying on its back in a storeroom, with the cash box missing.

Case was put over to Oct. 25.

Robert Adams, 404 Bay, said after his car hit a hydro pole at Bay and Government then veered onto a boulevard, he did not know he had been involved in an accident.

SENT TO JAIL

He admitted in court he was intoxicated and Magistrate Ostler said he had no alternative but to jail him 21 days.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Adams was taken to police headquarters, and had fallen from a chair he was sitting on and almost fell over while making a telephone call.

Skid marks 102 feet long were left by his car at the accident scene.

Rae Andrews admitted stealing $40 worth of property from a Samich home—including a marriage certificate.

Police said Andrews, of 36 Tobey, voluntarily gave himself up afterwards. Also missing from 4085 Prospect Lake Road Oct. 18 were clothing, food, lighter, clock and several items of jewelry. Everything had been recovered except two necklaces.

Andrews was remanded a week for sentence, after pleading guilty to breaking and entering and theft.

Eight charges of obtaining money from city stores by false pretences between Oct. 4 and 18 have been laid against 17-year-old William Harold Mack, 439 Kipling.

Thursday, Mack requested an adjournment to Oct. 28 to make his plea.

In each charge, the amount is stated as less than $30.

Long, Long Odds Ticket Holder Twice in Row

CALGARY (CP)—Gordon Dickinson, 32, a Calgary steamfittering foreman, defeated 200,000,000,000-to-1 odds recently by drawing winning tickets on horses in two consecutive sweepstakes.

Mr. Dickinson won $1,500 in June after he drew a ticket on Zed Avesta, a horse that ran fifth in the Irish sweepstakes.

He won $1,000 on Danella, a horse that placed well in the Cambridgeshire sweepstakes Oct. 16.

Calgary mathematics instructor Barry Pashak calculated the odds against a person having tickets drawn on a horse in two consecutive sweepstakes would be about 200,000,000,000-to-1.

Mr. Dickinson has been buying sweepstakes and other lottery tickets for the last 16 years and "never won a thing before."

Mad Monk Case

Prince Refutes TV Play

NEW YORK (UPI) — Counsel for the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) sought Thursday to bring an admission from Prince Felix Youssouppoff that a sexually suggestive television dramatization of his assassination of Rasputin was justified.

Youssouppoff, who told a State Supreme Court jury Wednesday how he poisoned, shot and beat Rasputin to death in 1916, underwent cross examination Thursday by CBS attorney Carleton Eldridge, Jr. It was a new experience for the 79-year-old Russian nobleman, whose only punishment for Rasputin's murder was banishment to a palatial family villa in the Crimea.

"I was never prosecuted because I am not a professional assassin," explained Youssouppoff in halting English to the jury of nine men and three women.

HISTORIC INCIDENT

Youssouppoff is suing CBS for $1.5 million in damages, charging that the 1963 television drama, "If I Should Die," was unauthorized only partially factual, and constituted an invasion of his privacy. He particularly objected to the film's suggestion that he paraded his 21-year-old wife, who was born Princess Irina Romanoff, to the lecherous Rasputin.

CBS contends that the assassination was a historic incident and is therefore subject to literary and dramatic interpretation.

It also contends that a sexual atmosphere did prevail at the Imperial Court where Rasputin organized orgies under the nose of the pious Czarina and her weak-willed husband, Nicholas II.

GYPSY VISIT

The Prince testified Wednesday that he killed Rasputin, not to save the Czarist regime from the power-mad monk's intrigues, but because he was personally revolted by the peasant mystic's sexual debauchery. The testimony seemed to come as a surprise to his own attorney, Herbert R. Zeienko, who said in his opening statement that Youssouppoff committed the crime out of patriotism.

Youssouppoff, a playboy who had undergone religious conversion as the result of a family tragedy, testified that he found it difficult to persuade Rasputin to come to tea at the Youssouppoff palace because the monk desired "to visit the gypsies."

COUNSEL QUERY

"That means visiting a gypsy village, of which there were a number around St. Petersburg (Leningrad), to hear the music," Youssouppoff explained, in response to Eldridge's questioning. "Did Rasputin say he wanted to go to the village to hold a woman in his arms?" Eldridge asked.

"It's possible," the Prince replied.

"Have you ever been to the gypsies?" asked the attorney.

"Many times," answered Youssouppoff. "The nearest village was only two kilometers from my palace."

RUSSIAN KISS

Youssouppoff said he first met Rasputin prior to his marriage to Princess Irina, the Czar's niece, in 1914. The meeting took place at the home of Maria Golovina, an aristocrat who was portrayed in the CBS television show as a woman who had come under the mesmerizing domination of Rasputin.

Eldridge asked Youssouppoff if he ever had seen the tangle-bearded Rasputin kiss Miss Golovina and the Prince answered, "yes."

"In Russia we always kiss each other," he said.

Laurentide Sells New Debentures

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

The high cost of fund raising for the Canadian financial companies was reflected in the sale by Laurentide Financing of $10,000,000 6 1/2 per cent convertible fund debentures of November 1975 at a discount rate of 97 to give a yield of 6.67 per cent.

The debentures in addition to giving this high rate of return also offer for a full 10-year period the right to conversion into 67 common shares of Laurentide for each $1,000 debenture.

At the price the debentures are being offered, this represents a conversion price of $14.48, or within $2 of the current market price of Laurentide shares.

CONFIDENCE DESTROYED

The market reception was said to be just moderate.

"The trouble is that the Atlantic Acceptance failure has destroyed, at least temporarily, investor confidence in all financial company issues," said one dealer. "Laurentide is suffering along with the others in the business."

PROFITS IN SQUEEZE

An increase in sales but a reduction in net income is reported by B.C. Forest Products for the third quarter of 1965, and also for the nine months of the current year.

Net income for the nine months was $7,546,300 ($2.18) against $8,384,100 ($2.43) in the corresponding period of 1964.

HIGHER COSTS

In the third quarter net income was $2,784,300 (80 cents) against $2,834,100 (82 cents) a year ago.

In the nine-month period B.C. Forest Products sales rose to $67,570,200 from $37,140,500, but the increase was more than swept up in higher operating costs.

The third-quarter figures included the extra income from the new newsprint mill at Crofton, which in addition to providing an increase in sales was also instrumental in creating new tax allowances which enabled the company to lower its tax rate to 6 per cent compared with 8 per cent a year ago.

BORROWER IN N.Y.

Trans Canada Pipelines has sold $10,000,000 first mortgage debentures in U.S. funds on the New York market at 100.50 to yield 5.08 per cent.

The bonds are similar to the $20,000,000 sold in the same market earlier this year.

The money will be used to reduce loans incurred in capital expenditures.

MONEY COST RISES

The cost of money went up this week at the sale of 91 days government treasury bills. The yield on the bills was 4.15 per cent, up .02 per cent from the 4.13 per cent of the three previous weeks.

The yield is the highest since November, 1962.

Mr. Sockett at Victoria will be taken by P. Evaschsen and W. Edlund.

OIL PROFITS UP

Canada's biggest oil company, Imperial Oil Ltd., reports further gains in net profit for the nine months ended Sept. 30. Net profit for the period was $61,300,000 ($1.93) compared with $57,403,000 ($1.81) in the corresponding period of 1964.

Forty Applicants Seek Position of Head Planner

A four-month search for a top-drawer professional to head community development department at City Hall has brought 40 applications, City Manager Dennis Young said Thursday.

Formation of the new department, to encompass all aspects of planning, including zoning, special projects, beautification and long-range use of all the city's resources, was decided upon in July.

It was made necessary by the resignation of Roderick Clark and his two assistants from the special projects department following two stormy weeks during which charges and countercharges were exchanged between Mr. Clark and other city officials, including the manager.

Mr. Young said that applications for the job, which was advertised in appropriate journals, have been received from all over North America and from Britain.

Predominantly, he said, they were from the Pacific Northwest, but well-qualified people were ready to take the job from eastern Canada and the United States and from Britain.

Aldermen will meet soon to consider the applications and narrow the field. Arrangements will be made for interviews.

Salary to be paid for a planner is a matter to be negotiated, Mr. Young said.

Grisly Remains Found

HYDE, England (Reuters)—Police squads moved into desolate Saddleworth Moor near here Thursday night after the discovery of the remains of a second body near that of a child murder victim's grave.

A man and a woman appeared in court earlier Thursday and were charged with the murder of the child—10-year-old Lesley Ann Downey, who vanished from a fairground the day after last Christmas.

Her body was discovered buried in the moorland peat five days ago.

Lan Brady, a 27-year-old clerk, and Myra Hindley, 23, were charged with Lesley's murder when they appeared in court to face earlier charges. Brady was accused of murdering a 17-year-old boy, Miss Hindley was charged with helping Brady afterward.

The girl's body was found during a massive police search of a windswept area of peaty grassland. Police said they believed they might find the bodies of seven other murder victims.

A pile of children's clothing was found Wednesday three miles from Lesley's body following reports that children had been lured to their deaths by a maniacal killer after wine parties and sex orgies.

The police probe—including widespread house-to-house searches and the reopening of investigations into missing person cases in Scotland and this industrial area of northwest England—has produced a series of photographs and a tape recording.

The recording was reported to cover the last moments of a dying child victim—tortured by her killer, according to one press report.

Police have asked local shepherds for help in identifying the photographs of moorland areas believed to contain other graves.

Police began the moorland search—one of the biggest in Britain since the war—after a tip that a man had been heard boasting in a tavern about burying bodies on the moor.

Agriculture Course Starts Next Term

Saanich's Claromont senior 10 students are studying the subject.

A school board spokesman said Wednesday that trustees have long felt there was a gap between agriculture education in junior high school and at the university level.

The announcement, made by principle J. W. Lott after consultation with the department of education, was welcomed by the Saanich school board at its last meeting.

For years Royal Oak and Mt. Newton junior high schools have given agriculture courses. This term 35 Grade 9 and 44 Grade 10 students are studying the subject.

Foster Week Starts

Sunday will be the start of JEFF week in British Columbia, in honor of the work being done by some 5,000 foster parents in the province.

JEFF stands for Joint Effort for Fostering.

Welfare Minister Black announced Thursday that the cabinet has proclaimed Oct. 24 to 30 as JEFF Week, during which efforts will be made to interest more people in becoming foster parents.

A similar program in 1964 resulted in a 25 per cent increase in the number of adoption placements in B.C.

A social welfare department spokesman said Thursday, "We hope to keep a continued supply of foster homes available."

Persons who are interested in becoming foster parents should call their nearest provincial social welfare office, he said.

New Hospital To Open At Mission

Health Minister Martin will cut the ribbon Sunday opening a new $1,500,000 hospital at Mission City in the Fraser Valley east of Vancouver.

Mission Memorial Hospital, with 54 active treatment beds and space for an additional 24 beds later, will replace an existing 30-bed hospital which has been serving that area since 1924.

Completion of the new hospital is part of a wide program of hospital construction throughout B.C. involving an expenditure of nearly $100,000,000.

Bandit's Face Misshapen

VANCOUVER (CP)—Holdup man described as having a badly misshapen face escaped with $4,300 from a Bank of Montreal branch Thursday.

Piano in Shocking State Soloist Tells Audience

BRISTOL, England—Concert pianist Julius Katchen interrupted his rendition of a Mozart concerto, turned to the audience and said:

"This piano is in a disgraceful state."

The audience, which included Lord Mayor Tom Martin, gasped.

"The tuner should have come back to tune the instrument," said Katchen. "but he failed to show up. I want to apologize for this ridiculous state of affairs."

He turned to go on with the concerto and added: "We carry on under an intolerable burden."

Three Given Nobel Prizes

STOCKHOLM (Reuters)—Three Americans and a Japanese were awarded the 1965 Nobel Prizes in physics and chemistry Thursday.

The work for which they won the prizes could lead to further miniaturization of computers and radios and better antibiotics and anesthetics.

The three scientists sharing the physics prize for their work in quantum electrodynamics are professors Julian Schwinger, 47, of Harvard University, Richard Feynman, 47, of the California Institute of Technology, and Shinichiro Tomonaga, 59, of the Tokyo University of Education. Another Harvard professor, Robert Burns Woodward, 48, whose work has produced several new antibiotics, won the chemistry prize for his services to the study of organic synthesis. The Nobel prizes are worth $39,000. The three physics winners will split their prize money.

Tomonaga and Professor Hideki Yukawa, who won the physics prize in 1949, are the only Japanese ever to receive Nobel awards.

A member of the Swedish Science Academy, which annually awards the Nobel prizes, said the work of professors Schwinger, Feynman and Tomonaga, on a long-term basis, could lead to further advances in the study of radio waves and thus to improved radio techniques and further miniaturization of computers and transistors.

Handcraftsmanship inside and out.

(Isn't it a bit old-fashioned in this mass-production age?)

Sure, handcraftsmanship is old-fashioned. In this machine age, sad to say, it's almost extinct.

But at Fleetwood, we haven't lost the art. For although we employ the very latest electronic innovations, it is our careful handcraftsmanship that makes the quality difference.

Take our cabinetry, for example. Imported and domestic woods are carefully selected, matched, carved and hand-finished by expert craftsmen, in a procedure requiring 17 painstaking steps. The result of such conscientious work is an exquisite piece of furniture you'll be proud to own.

Then there's the handcraftsmanship inside. Every chassis is carefully hand assembled, with up to 573 connections soldered by hand to assure maximum reliability. Add to this carefully chosen components and exhaustive quality control, and you have a set that will give you years of trouble-free performance.

Be it a Fleetwood TV, stereo, 3-way combination or radio, handcrafted quality is the key. And if this kind of quality belongs to the good old days, then call us old-fashioned. By all means.

Duncan Logger Killed

PORT RENFREW — A 23-year-old Duncan logger was killed near here Thursday morning, when a log slipped off a trailer and fell on him.

He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Harvey Bennett lived all his life in the Cowichan Valley, and started logging when he was 17.

His family earns its living from the woods. Older brother Bob, Duncan, is a sawmill employee; younger brother Malcolm, Mesachie Lake, works for Hillcrest Logging.

His father Stan Bennett was a logger until recently, when he became a civic employee at Duncan.

The dead man's brother-in-law Ray Manweiler, Youbou, is a sawmill employee.

Third Try Made For Bank

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Premier Bennett said Thursday night British Columbia will make its third attempt to get a charter for a bank of British Columbia.

He told an election meeting this time the provincial government will make it clear that it will not seek any share participation in the bank.

Application for a charter would be made at the next parliament.

The bank would have $100,000,000 paid up capital and $200,000,000 in reserve capital. It would not be controlled by the province, as many have feared, and would abide by the Bank Act, he said.

Beer Saturday For Man in Pub

They've started the bung but the man in the pub won't get his beer until Saturday—some time.

Beer parlor owners have been warned to have their slingers ready for action Saturday but breweries won't make any promises as to just what time.

The strike which caused such unspeakable hardship to the beer-drinking public for almost nine weeks ended Wednesday.

Members of the striking International Union of Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers (IUBD), are expected to return to work Friday.

Election Roundup

Ship Hopes 'Dashed by Grits'

Hopes for the immediate start on a sister-ship for the $6,000,000 Queen of Prince Rupert launched last week in Victoria have been dashed by the Liberal Government, Frank Hunter, Social Credit candidate, said Thursday.

"The federal government has dealt this blow through discontinuance of the former Conservative government's 40 per cent shipbuilding subsidy," the Victoria candidate told a meeting in Esquimalt Junior High.

The dangerous conditions from high winds that delayed the launching last week makes necessary another breakthrough to run out from Macaulay Point, he said.

Costs of draining the McHugh Valley of the Saanich Peninsula in an attempt to eradicate the golden nematode is strictly a 100 per cent federal responsibility, George Chatterton said Thursday.

Cost of improving the valley's drainage to control the flooding of the lowlands during the winter, and lessen possible spread of the nematode by flood waters, is approximately $12,500.

The star of the George Chatterton Conservative meeting at the K. of P. Hall in Sidney Wednesday night, according to Mr. Chatterton, was his most persistent questioner, Linda Douma, last year's Miss Canada.

Miss Douma, and 43 others present, heard Mr. Chatterton state as two main issues: integrity of government and education.

"Our program for education goes even farther than the recommendation of the Bladen commission," said Mr. Chatterton.

The old line parties are selling out Canada's natural resources, charged William Stuart Morrison, Communist candidate for Victoria at the University of Victoria Thursday.

"We've seen our natural gas and our Columbia hydro sold out, hold fire now is $200, twice what it was 10 years ago.

Mr. Morrison also called for a $1,000,000,000 subsidy to the shipping industry and creation of a federal-provincial authority to deal with automation.

Unknown Cause

'The Body' Dead at 42

HIDDEN HILLS, Calif. (UPI)—Marie (The Body) McDonald, whose divorces, mystery kidnapping and escapades kept her in the headlines more than a decade, was found dead Thursday of undetermined causes in the bedroom of her home.

Suicide, natural causes and accidental all were being "fully explored" as possible causes of death, according to Sheriff's Sgt. John Chapman. Foul play definitely has been ruled out, he said.

The body of the blonde glamor girl-actress, 42, was discovered by husband Donald F. Taylor at 4 a.m. as she sat slumped at her dressing table. She was pronounced dead by Dr. H. Bryan Herdez, a neighbor.

PILLS FOUND
Detectives found some bottles of pills on the star's dressing table but said most were vitamins or medications. They were taken for analysis.

The Los Angeles county coroner said an autopsy conducted this afternoon "did not reveal the cause of death." Earlier, the coroner said death could have resulted from "natural causes or suicide."

NO INJURIES
In the two-line statement after the autopsy, the coroner said the examination showed "no injuries." A statement as to cause "is pending toxicological and microscopic tests."

These were expected to take from two to several days. Sheriff's detectives said there were no signs of violence and no outward appearances of suicide. Taylor told officers she retired from two to several days.

RCMP Nab Trapper

FORT NELSON (CP)—A trapper captured after a two-day chase through northern forests was charged Thursday with the attempted murder of an RCMP constable.

Police said William Mediamot, 38, was finally brought down by a police dog. They said about 10 shots had been fired at officers during the hunt. The chase began after Constable Ken Bellemuir reported he was fired at Tuesday morning when he went to a cabin at Mile 35 on the Alaska Highway to investigate a reported theft of a stove.

REINFORCEMENTS

Const. Bellemuir called in civilian reinforcements and the cabin was surrounded, but the suspect escaped Tuesday night. RCMP officers from several centres were brought in and a suspect was surrounded early Thursday about five miles off the highway. RCMP said the tracking dog knocked the man to the ground and they ran in, grabbed him and seized two loaded rifles.

Police said none of the shots found their mark and the man's fire was not returned.

at 9:30 last night happy that they were about to launch a new cosmetics enterprise. He added that his wife was convalescing from recent surgery.

MARRIED SIX
Miss McDonald, famed for her physical endowments, was married six times. In the home at the time of her death, in addition to Taylor, were her three children by her marriage to shoe magnate Harry Karl, Denise, 16, and Harrison, 15, both adopted, and Tina Marie, 9.

While never a major star, Miss McDonald's motion picture assignments were spiced by her off-screen hijinks. She was in and out of the courts with all of her husbands, most recently with Karl who is now married to Actress Debbie Reynolds, when she won a demand for increased child support payments.

Old Plays Didn't Appeal

Olde England Old Hat Festival Deficit Shows

Olde England is old hat in Victoria and this is one reason why the Theatre Festival Society went $11,500 into the red this year, members of city council finance committee were told Thursday.

Aldermen agreed to ante up $5,500 of the deficit from the city's ever-accommodating contingency fund and suggested that the society approach the city earlier next year and ask the municipality to underwrite losses up to a specified figure.

DID NOT GO OVER

Included in the festival, which ran from Aug. 14 to Sept. 6, were such venerable English plays as Hobson's Choice and The Winslow Boy, and these did not go over, Mrs. Audrey St.

Denys Johnson, festival president, told the committee. Local theatregoers were not enthusiastic and it was being realized that the festival would have to depend on local audiences as much as the tourists it hopes to attract, Mrs. Johnson said.

SUBSIDIZED

It was quite likely that the festival would have to be subsidized in future, however, as so many others across the country were helped. One reason for this was that some professional actors had to be engaged to keep up the quality, and these had to be paid equity scale.

"I think the idea of going out to the theatre is getting across to Victoria," said Ald. Clyde Savage. "Many people, like myself, are sick and tired of sitting at home watching television and going to movies. We are beginning to realize that the theatre has much to offer."

NOT SIT-AT-HOMES

"We're not sit-at-homes any longer," said Mayor Wilson.

Mrs. Johnson said that about 10,000 people saw the five festival productions and, of that number, between 4,000 and 5,000 were paying customers.

Prison Goes Co-Ed

TORONTO (CP)—There's a room for boys and girls together in rehabilitative training schools, Allan Grossman, Ontario reforms institutions minister, said Wednesday.

In a brief to the legislature's select committee on youth, Grossman suggested the possibility of co-educational training schools for young people up to 18 years old.

A step in that direction has already been taken, he said, with the practice of inviting college girls to dances held at the Ontario Training Centre for Young Men in Brampton.

The dances are part of a growing community involvement in rehabilitation, he said.

Water Diversion Protested

MEMONETH (Reuters)—Hundreds of angry Welsh nationalists shouted taunts, rocked cars, and scuffled with police as a reservoir that will supply Welsh water to the English city of Liverpool was opened Friday.

The demonstrators, who outnumbered the 500 guests at the opening, handed out more than 1,000 copies of slogans such as "We will defend it."

They shouted "Hands off Wales" and "Scouse Go Home." Scouse is a slang term for Liverpoolians.

Many demonstrators lay down on the road and were dragged away by a corps of 50 police. Others pasted posters on the windshields of cars belonging to guests at the opening.

Nationalist leader alderman Gwynfor Evans handed Lord Mayor David Conley of Liverpool a protest statement which said:

In fact, they really ought to be charging admission here in York East where Whipper Billy Watson, the gentleman wrestler and Stephen Otto, the public-spirited barrister are putting on the swiftest campaign show in all of Metro.

All of which isn't making it all that funny to Steve Otto, who, friends insist, himself long has been a doer of community good.

The Whip is the Conservative.

The Whip's Show

Steve Otto is the Liberal, and the riding's MP in the late lamented parliament. And, O Yes, there is a third man, the NDP candidate, a clergyman, Rev. William Smith. But it's the Whip's show.

"Where," asks Steve Otto, wryly, "does a mere barrister, or for that matter a churchman, get off in a popularity contest with a pin-up hero like Whipper?"

Then he answers his own question. "It's like running against the guy on the white charger."

But undeterred if not undiminished, Steve Otto is running. And hard.

At Bus Stops

Just like his life depended on it, which it does, his political life anyway.

He's at the bus stops in the morning, handing out bus tickets. For free.

Which makes it fun for the voters who ride the buses in East York.

Sounds like it could be an expensive operation, but it isn't all that costly.

The bus tickets are attached to his vote-for-Steve Otto pamphlet which he distributes, one to a customer, to the commuters in the queues.

But how many, actually, can you get rid of when with the free bus tickets and election brochure go a pleasant good morning, a hand-shake and the introductory "I'm Steve Otto, your Liberal candidate; hope you'll read this brochure and vote for me Nov. 8."

Hustle Hard
Not many, says Steve Otto, not nearly enough, for the morning bus rush at any one stop doesn't go much beyond 30 minutes.

Which, if you hustle down the line, could run to maybe 60 tickets.

Steve Otto has another little gimmick.

Favors for the ladies. Gold-capped vials of perfume. Not so tiny either—maybe two inches long by a half inch in diameter.

Good stuff, too. Not just cologne, but perfume. White Shoulders, they call it.

For Woman's Purse
Steve Otto had the thing especially made up, with his name in gold letters and gold "x" on a red dot stamped on the vial.

A cute and entirely acceptable little thing for a lady's purse.

Hands them out with a smile and a pleasant "good evening, I'm Steve Otto," when he goes door-knocking his way through the constituency, and presents them, of course, when he attends coffee parties.

How many has he given away? Again, at first glance, it could look to be a costly gimmick.

"But," asks his campaign manager, industrialist Carl Hinch, "on how many doors can you knock in an evening? Or how many coffee parties can you take in over the day?"

Returning Favor

How come an industrialist, on his own time, is running an election campaign?

"I'm returning a favor," explains Carl Hinch.

This spring, he recounts, his wife's "cleaning woman," a new immigrant from the Netherlands and her husband—neither of whom could read English—signed a contract for a "free sample" of siding on their modest two-bedroom bungalow.

Catch was that it wasn't so "free" that they didn't get a bill for $3,000, which, stop their mortgage payments, sunk them without a trace in a sea of debt.

Steve Otto took the case, won it for the Dutchman and his wife. There was no fee.

"What are you going to do with a guy like that," asks Carl

Grain SlowedTrain Crews Fear Penalties

VANCOUVER (CP)—Fear of demerit marks is causing CNR train crews to slow down waterfront switching and intensify Vancouver's grain tie-up.

He said the crews are penalized if they alarm cars together too hard. They tend to play it slow, moving cars into sidings when they could save time by bumping them in and letting them roll.

IMPACT RECORDS
C. E. Cannon, chairman of Local 1040 of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen (CLC), said CN switchers blame inaccurate impact records for the trouble. The recorders measure the speed at which freight cars are banged together.

The speed of shunting trains is no more than five miles an hour, he said.

ONLY HALF FULL
Some elevators in the port are only half full. The railways and grain companies have traded statements refusing to accept the blame.

In a statement Thursday, A. T. Baker, general manager of Alberta Wheat Pool, accepted a CPR challenge that it can move all the cars the terminals can unload.

He said the wheat pool has rehired 13 men laid off because of a shortage of boxcars. He looked for a quick end to "the senseless controversy over the grain slowdown."

The pool had laid off men because the railways had not supplied enough boxcars, he said.

Hinch. "When he wants you to run his campaign—you run it, don't you?"

Steve Otto has to go for such stunts as the free bus tickets and the vials of White Shoulders, explains Carl Hinch, if only to offset what he calls "the absolutely fantastic publicity that the Whip is getting."

But it could take more than gimmicks.

Instant Crowd

For the Whip has only to show his face on a street—and boom—instant crowd. Of admirers. Kids and their moms. The Whip's going through East York like the great-hearted modern paper that he is.

"Wanna rattle?" squeaks a cheeky eight-year-old.

"Sure do," agrees the Whip amiably, and the next minute he's moaning with pain as the kid reaches maybe one-sixth of the way around his substantial middle.

Kids Delighted

The Whip puts on a show in the street that must rival his performance in the ring, and the delighted kid goes roaring off to his incredulous and madly jealous pals. "Hey, you guys—see me and the Whip?"

Socially, the Whip's in the good and capable hands of Miss Mary Sutherland, a business bachelor girl and Conservative constituency secretary.

She sees to it that her big, good-looking and impressively personable charge is done out in a starched white button-down shirt, blue four-in-hand tie and double-breasted blue lounge suit.

Coffee Parties
Then she hands him over to Steve Douglas, the gravel-voiced sportscaster, who trots him along to those interminable coffee parties.

Sometimes Miss Sutherland goes along too, "To see how our boy's going over with the ladies."

Well, Miss Sutherland, how is he going over?

At this point she is just about ecstatic.

In York West the Grits think they've got everybody swooning over Bob Winters—and mind you, Bob isn't at all bad.

"But if you want to see what swooning really is, East York's the place."

"Why right now we're figuring on having an ambulance follow the Whip around to pick up and revive the bodies when he goes door-knocking."

This sounds kind of strange talk coming from Miss Sutherland who is an entirely proper, if not perhaps even a bit prim sort of a business bachelor girl.

But she's been listening, obviously, to Globe and Mail sports editor Jim Vipond, Steve Douglas, sports writer Jim Coleman, half the sports staff from the Tely and assorted other characters of athletic interest who are all busy in the Whip's campaign corner.

As a matter of fact, the Whip's committee rooms, says Miss Sutherland, some days could pass for the sports department at the Globe.

Like they say, in East York is the fun one.

Tiger Regains Boxing Crown

NEW YORK (AP)—Dick Tiger, a grim stalker from Nigeria, won back the world middleweight title he lost 22 months ago by whipping Joey Giardello decisively on a unanimous verdict Thursday night in 15 tough rounds.

A capacity crowd of 17,064 that paid $161,964 at Madison Square Garden saw the 36-year-old African open cuts around both of Giardello's eyes. Thumping a steady barrage on Giardello's body while bongo drums beat a steady accompaniment in the background, Tiger piled up points but never was able to drop the veteran, who took the title from him Dec. 7, 1961, at Atlantic City, N.J.

FOUR CARDS AGREE

Referee Johnny Lo Bianco scored it 9-5-1 in rounds, judge Al Berl 10-5 and judge Tony Castellano 8-6-1, all for the Nigerian. The AP card had it 10-4-1 for Tiger.

Although Giardello had won nine straight during nearly three years and had beaten Tiger in two of three previous bouts, Tiger had gone into the ring as a 7-5 favorite. He had been a 3-1 choice when he lost at Atlantic City.

BATTLE-SCARRED

The 35-year-old, battle-scarred boxer from Cherry Hill, N.J., near Philadelphia, simply could not keep the Tiger from climbing all over him. Tiger, who weighed 158½ pounds to 160, started strongly, carried the battle to the American, and piled up such a wide lead that he was out of reach when Giardello started a late comeback.

Giardello closed with a rally that was too late and too little. Although he scored points, his punches had lost their zip. He would have needed a knockout to win it, but Joey hasn't knocked anybody out since 1961.

TIGER WAS SHARPER

Tiger was much sharper than in Atlantic City and slammered away to the body throughout the bout. Referee Lo Bianco did not rush in to break the boxers too quickly, and the body barrage often continued for several seconds.

Giardello, a master at the headfeints, jab and sliding moves, was cut on the side of the left eye in the second and on the side of the right eye in the ninth. Although he was blood-smeared at times, the cuts never seemed to bother him.

SOLID EFFECT

Tiger's best weapon is his left hook, which he threw over and over again with solid effect. He crowded Joey to the ropes time after time and punished him as he switched from body to head and back to the body again.

When Giardello did put on his late spurt, the blows had no big punch and they bounced off Tiger's head like rain drops in a summer shower.

CROWD CHEERS

The big crowd rose and cheered in the 12th when Giardello, after absorbing a bad beating for two minutes, gamely fought back and stung the Nigerian and tried to slug it out with him.

It was obvious that Joey had gone to the well once too often. This was his 12th fight and his 23rd defeat to 96 wins. He fought seven draws and had one no-decision contest.

STARTED IN 1952

Tiger, who never has been stopped, now has a 52-14-1 record for 69 fights since he came out of Amalgamo, Orin province, in Nigeria and started fighting in 1952.

He won the title from Gené Fullmer, Oct. 23, 1962, defended it against Fullmer twice, once in Las Vegas, Nev., and once in Tadan, Nigeria, before losing to Giardello in Atlantic City.

Hunters Forecast Weather

TORONTO (CP) — If you're going hunting and want to be weather-wise, you can take along a transistor radio to listen to the forecasts, buy a local newspaper or learn how to read a barometer and carry one with you.

But if you're not one of those people who can predict rain by referring to an ache in your joints and you'd like to impress your buddies with your wisdom in the ways of the outdoors, Ontario forest rangers offer some tips.

The forest protection staff of the department of lands and forests has developed a simple set of rules for short-range weather forecasting to help in plan effective firefighting strategy.

What's more, federal meteorologists say the rules apply generally to most areas of Canada except for mountainous regions and the far north.

When you're deep in the woods beyond the range of official forecasts, you can get a clue to the next day's weather by observing wind conditions before sunset.

Light breezes from the west or northwest usually accompany sunny weather. However, when the wind shifts to the southeast or northeast after a period of unsettled weather, you can expect steady precipitation. An showers are due if the wind switches toward the west and thunderclouds develop.

Bright sun in mid-afternoon simplest signs that there will be clear weather the following day. A rise in temperature after the sun sets usually means cloudy weather next morning. A formation of thin, white clouds obscuring the moon also warns of overcast skies.

If you're travelling on a flat open area you can expect steady winds and a dip in temperatures.

A sudden shift in the wind from the southwest toward the west, or from northwest to due north, is a clue that temperatures will drop within the next two hours.

Winds tend to rise with erratic directional shifts toward the south and as thunderstorms approach.

The firefighters emphasize that their system is not infallible but there's a good chance it will help you avoid the unhappy situation of standing in a downpour and wondering why.

Barry Sadler Back in Goal For United Side

Victoria United will have Barry Sadler back in goal when it meets North Shore Luckies Saturday in their Pacific Coast Soccer League game at Royal Athletic Park.

Sadler, who spent last season with New Westminster Royals after three years with United, lives in Port Alberni and signed with United this season as a reserve goalkeeper. But Al Davies is unable to play this weekend, and United wants to give Sadler some action anyway, so he gets it Saturday.

It will be the second league start for United, whose other three games have been in the Anderson Cup competition. The league match ended 2-0 for UBC Thunderbirds.

LINEUP SET

Tony Quinn and Len Anderson will be at fullback, with George Paula, Bill Hamilton and Dave Stothard on the half line and Bert Souter at centre forward, flanked at inside by Ike McKay and Peter Goodwing. Jim Jamieson and Dunc McCaig will be on the wings, with Tom Locke, Russ Ball and Don McIntosh in reserve.

North Shore has played three league matches and has a draw and two losses.

New Westminster plays Firefighters and Thunderbirds meet Burnaby Villa on the mainland Saturday, and Colubus plays St. Andrews Sunday.

Gorge and Navy will be going for a share of first place Sunday in the Victoria and District Soccer Association first division, as league-leading Hourigan's Kickers draw a bye.

Gorge plays Luckies at Centre Park and Navy takes on Victoria West at Royal Athletic Park. In the other first division game, it's British and Scottish at Heywood Brook.

Back Woes Sideline Rod Gilbert

NEW YORK (AP) — Right wing Rod Gilbert, New York Rangers' leading scorer last season, entered a New York hospital for treatment of a back injury Thursday and will be lost to the National Hockey League team for about a week.

Team physician Dr. Kazuo Yanagisawa said Gilbert was suffering from muscle spasms at the base of the spine, and will be out of action one week to 10 days.

Gilbert, who has a history of back trouble and underwent an operation five years ago, scored 25 goals, 36 assists and 61 points for Rangers last season.

Will Eddie Shack Be a Sideshow?

If Toronto Maple Leafs are planning to make a sort of a sideshow out of colorful Eddie Shack by having him shuttle between their three professional farm clubs, they haven't even hinted at it to the Victoria Maple Leafs, manager Buck Houle says.

A story, written by a Toronto newspaper and appearing yesterday in a Vancouver newspaper reported that Shack is to be used as a drawing card for Victoria in the Western Hockey League and Tulsa in the Central league as well as with Rochester in the American league.

BOOSTS CROWDS

Shack is currently with Rochester, the story said, because of its home games this season in Maple Leaf Gardens and the Toronto management feels that his presence in the Rochester lineup will boost attendance for the AHL games set in Toronto.

This, the Toronto correspondent carried on, led to the thinking that Shack would also help fill arenas in Victoria and Tulsa.

"This," said Victoria manager Buck Houle has tonight after being apprised of the report, "is something I haven't heard

"I don't believe that it will happen."

And I don't think that they will think that they would ask him to do it. Shack is a pretty good hockey player and a real

Police Seeking Rebel Weapons

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI)—A special police force was assigned Thursday to collect scores of weapons which rebel civilians are believed to have hidden in downtown Santo Domingo during the recent revolt. The collection was arranged in an effort to end the violence which caused at least five deaths in four days this week.

But Morris, Bullocks Out

Fouts and Carphin Back Dennis Definite Starter

It's not totally correct to say that B.C. Lions MUST win Sunday's game against Saskatchewan Roughriders if they are to make the Western Football Conference playoffs.

Sunday's game will be seen here only on Cablevision starting at 2 p.m., and broadcast on CKNW (980) at the same time.

The Lions would still have an outside chance if they lost to the Riders by less than 12 points, but it's so slim it could slide under a shadow. Still, all eventualities must be considered, so here is how it would work.

If Riders beat the Lions, then lost to Edmonton Eskimos while the Lions beat Calgary Stampeders in their final game, Riders and Lions would be tied for third place with identical 1-1-1 records against each other for the season.

The last playoff spot would then go to the team that has scored the most points in those three meetings. At the moment, the Lions hold a 12-point edge. The first game ended 10-10, and Lions won the second, 26-14. Both were played in Regina.

So the Lions would still have that tiny chance if they were to Ingarfield For Reggie?

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says New York Rangers and Boston Bruins are working toward a National Hockey League trade which could be completed by Monday.

The report says the Rangers, fifth in the standings last season, are negotiating to send centre Earl Ingarfield to the Bruins, who finished last, in exchange for Reggie Fleming, a hard-hitting winger who starred with Chicago Black Hawks before going to Boston last season.

lose by 11 points or less. But then they would need the cooperation of Edmonton and Calgary. With a win Sunday they can do it all themselves.

News from the Lions' camp is that Lonnie Dennis will definitely start for the first time this season, playing at right offensive tackle.

Defensive end Dick Fouts and Jim Carphin will probably be back in the lineup, but halfbacks Ron Morris and Amos Bullocks are definitely out.

Bauman Gets First Shutout

QUEBEC (CP) — Gary Bauman recorded his first shutout of the young American Hockey League season as Quebec Aces blanked Hershey Bears 5-0 before 3,770 fans Thursday night.

Aces scored twice in the first period and added three markers in the final.

Aces scorers were Bill Sutherland, Don Blackburn, Leon Blackford, Cleland Morrison and Gordon Labossiere.

Blades Recall Goalie Marcel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Blades of the Western Hockey League announced Thursday they have recalled goalie Marcel Pelletier to play in the opener against Baltimore of the American Hockey League tonight. The Blades had earlier optioned Pelletier to St. Paul of the Central League.

Browns, Cards, Giants

Green Bay rates a 14-point spread over the Dallas Cowboys, who defeated the Packers in a pre-season exhibition game, and Boston Bruins are considered 17 points better than the Los Angeles Rams in the key games involving western division clubs.

The Chicago Bears are favored by six to whip visiting Detroit, San Francisco holds a slim two-point edge in its home encounter with Minnesota and the Eagles are a seven-point choice over the Pittsburgh Steelers at Philadelphia.

Morrill, now in his 10th pro season, was acknowledged as "one of the league's outstanding relief pitchers" during stints with the Forty-Niners, Steelers and most recently the Lions.

He has gained that security with the Giants, who have only experienced quarterbacks behind him, and the results have been impressive.

The Browns, of course, have Frank Ryan to complement the running of Jimmy Brown but the loss of flanker Paul Warfield has reduced the effectiveness of Cleveland's passing game. The Giants' premier receiver, Del Shofner, is a question mark after a pulled groin muscle.

Eastern Division Scrambled

NFL Bench-Warmers Take Sunday's Spotlight

By JOE GERGEN
UPI Sports Writer

Two quarterbacks who spent the greater part of their National Football League careers on the bench are expected to receive the opportunity Sunday to unscramble the complicated eastern division race.

Earl Morrill of the New York Giants and Loyie (Buddy) Humphrey of the St. Louis Cardinals are the signal-callers whose success or failure could spell the difference in the final standings this season.

Morrill, acquired from the Detroit Lions prior to the start of the campaign, will definitely open for the Giants against the defending NFL champion Cleveland Browns while Humphrey may get his first starting nod against the Washington Redskins due to a shoulder injury to the Cardinals' regular signal-caller, Charley Johnson.

The games are vital in the eastern division scramble since the Browns and Cards are deadlocked for first place with 4-1 records while the Giants are only one game back at 3-2. Cleveland is an eight-point choice and St. Louis is favored by 13.

The Chicago Bears are favored by six to whip visiting Detroit, San Francisco holds a

There still could be a run of coho to Cowichan Bay, but it is getting mighty late.

Bud Dunnett and Paul Jones hit into a couple of bright fresh-run coho off the Separation Point-Sansung Narrows waters Wednesday and forecast they were the start of a new run. They reported fair numbers of coho heading towards Cowichan Bay.

But veteran Cowichan Bay anglers like Bill Hoskin, Lee Hallberg, Jim Gilbert and Claud Creed are alarmed about this year's lack of coho. Hoskin, who in 1962 captured all the honors for Cowichan Bay coho fishing and regularly spends fall holidays there, packed it up this year after six days of fishing for one fish.

Gilbert got one fish for four trips. We must have hit a lucky day when with Bruce Colegrave we got three fish on bucktails. Fishing has been spotty and in pockets.

The big hook-nose northerns haven't shown at all. Anglers at Cowichan Bay last weekend reported seeing no jumpers, which is something unusual for Cowichan Bay at this time of year.

The fisheries department hasn't been of any help in letting some coho through for sports fishermen. Since the federal fisheries department took over control from the international commission in September there has been a steady three days of netting in Juan de Fuca Strait each week.

This is in the cycle year for the 1962 brood when only 11,000 coho escaped to the Cowichan River. Poor fishing could have been expected this year in Cowichan Bay, and also it could have been expected that the federal fisheries officials would have made a special effort to conserve the run, instead of allowing even more netting than last year when they had a seven-day closure to allow the Cowichan run through. There will be three days of netting next week and then all commercial fishing stops, but it is probably too late to help the sports fishermen get even the tag end of the runs.

It seems pretty obvious who calls the tune to the fisheries department—the big fish companies, who must also take the blame for destruction of the chum salmon runs and who form the only fishing group which hasn't offered personal help for salmon conservation.

King Fishermen Contest entries show a drop of more than 1,000 coho entries for October this year as compared to last year—579 coho entries to Oct. 20, 1965 and 1,691 coho entries for all of October, 1964.

The problem is there is only a token effort being made towards rehabilitation of the coho and spring salmon caught by sports fishermen.

A check by Amalgamated Conservation Society members at the federal fisheries research station at Nanaimo last weekend disclosed five persons out of 284—two scientists, two technicians and one clerk—are engaged in coho and spring salmon studies.

Half their time is devoted to studies of the Columbia River Chinook evaluation program and not towards improvement of Canadian stocks of coho. It was learned a study of the Cowichan River will take up to 12 years to complete and then it would be five years before any rehabilitation program could be instituted.

This just isn't good enough and sports fishermen will just have to shout, and shout, and shout until there is a change in fisheries department thinking, or a change in personnel to those who will recognize the problems of the sports fishermen.

There is one more week and two more weekends to fish in the 1965 edition of the King Fisherman Contest.

Cowichan Bay is a good bet for salmon despite recent catch reports. Winter springs in the tiny class are being taken off Pedder Bay. Springs up to 10 pounds are being taken from Rumberton to Macurdy Point and McKenzie Bay to White Lady on Minnow-Tessier and flasher, Tomick plugs, and 250 feet and planer. Saanich Inlet from Coles Bay to Tod Inlet is full of just-legal-size grilse, but they are feeding on small shrimp and are hard to take.

The word on freshwater fishing is improving rapidly. Some rivers are a little muddy, but fine weather will clear them for the weekend. Coho, cutthroats and rainbows are being taken regularly. Lakes are pretty good and Elk and Prospect are among the best.

Lindsay Would Play —But NHL Says 'No'

TORONTO (CP)—A rule concerning voluntary retirement in the National Hockey League is keeping veteran Ted Lindsay from rejoining Detroit Red Wings.

"It must be a new rule or something," he said. "I asked to be placed on the voluntary retired list last season because I was afraid some team might draft me and I knew I wouldn't report. That would have meant suspension and I didn't like the idea of spending the rest of my life on the National Hockey League's suspended list."

Lindsay, a 40-year-old left winger, played 13 seasons with Detroit until being traded to Chicago Black Hawks in the 1957-58 season. He played three seasons with Chicago and returned after the 1959-60 campaign.

ENDED RETIREMENT
But the native of Renfrew, Ont., ended four years of retirement to rejoin Detroit last season and he surprised the experts by scoring 14 goals. He said afterwards he was satisfied with his efforts and that he was retiring once more.

CFL Players Open Drive For Pensions

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Football Players' Association has asked the Canadian Football League to contribute $30,000 a year to a pension fund, but it may take a while before it gets an answer.

"There are a lot of complications, particularly with the Canada Pension Plan coming into effect next year," association president Gary Schneider said in an interview Thursday.

NOT RECOGNIZED
But that isn't the only problem facing the fledgling association—it still has not been recognized by the CFL.

"I'm confident we will receive recognition," Schneider, a former Ottawa player, said. "We've been in touch with the league several times and I'm confident they are acting in good faith."

The pension plan request revealed by Schneider was in an association brief presented to the league last June, but release of its contents has just been authorized by the association.

"We wanted to give the general managers and owners enough time to study it before making our request public."

FINISHING TEAM
Schneider was elected president at the association's first meeting in May. Although he decided to retire from football during the summer, the executive asked the young lawyer to finish his one-year term.

The pension plan requested by the players would involve a $300 annual contribution by each player—a total of about $30,000 for all nine teams—and would be matched either by the league or by individual teams.

WANT LEAGUE HELP
"We'd rather have the money come from the league to protect teams in the case of a bad year," Schneider said.

The association said an annual all-star game, possibly at the end of the exhibition schedule and before league play starts, would be another source of revenue, along with a percentage of both gate receipts and sale of TV rights for the Grey Cup.

In Montreal, NHL president Clarence Campbell said the rule concerning the voluntary retired list "is the same rule that has been in effect for at least 20 years. No words have been changed in it at all."

Fouts Named West's Lineman of the Year

Deck Fouts, the hulking defensive end with B.C. Lions, has been named winner of the DeMarco-Bockel trophy as lineman of the year in the Western Football Conference.

Fouts, who has made the all-Canadian team for the past two seasons, beat out tackle Al Benedict of Saskatchewan Roughriders and end Tommy-Joe Coffey of Edmonton Eskimos for the award, won last year by teammate Tom Brown.

The trophy, put up in memory of two former Saskatchewan players who died in a plane crash, will be awarded Sunday when the Lions play Roughriders in Vancouver.

Garden Notes

They Devour Lawns

By M. V. CHENNET
I had a note the other day from the Provincial Entomologist reminding me that crane flies are being seen in increasing numbers these days, and that the larvae of this fly is one of the most troublesome of our lawn pests.

The crane fly, known to children as Daddy-long-legs, has long, dangling legs, two narrow wings, and probably the most awkward flight performance of any flying creature. It puzzles me how the things ever manage to stay alive long enough to find and court a mate and lay their infernal eggs in our lawns, for with their feeble little wings and ungainly legs, they flutter around like a helicopter with the hiccups, obviously unable to control their flight enough to take evasive action when attacked by their natural enemies. Enough of them always come through, though, to provide a first-class headache to gardeners everywhere, and especially in lawns.

These fluttery, awkward creatures are most common in September and October, and during this period each female lays up to 500 eggs just below the surface in damp soil. These hatch in about 14 days, and the emerging grubs, called leatherjackets, feed upon the grass roots through the fall and early winter.

These larvae are, of course, quite small at first, and the damage done by their early feeding isn't noticeable. But by April they have grown enormously and have become voracious legless grubs, brownish-grey in color and up to 1½ inches long, eating huge quantities of grass roots and creating dead patches in the lawn, especially bad in May. Feeding ceases in midsummer when the leatherjackets turn to pupae, and these pupae hatch out in the fall as adult, airborne Daddy-long-legs or crane flies.

When newly hatched, the young grubs are susceptible to heat and drought, and many of them die in the soil when we have a dry, sunny autumn. It is when cool, damp conditions prevail that leatherjackets are the most numerous and destructive. They attack the roots of many plants, usually feeding below ground but on warm, damp nights of late spring they will come to the surface and cut off plant stems at soil level in the same manner as cutworms.

In cultivated ground, damage is most frequent among perennial flowers and strawberries, but young plants of all kinds may be attacked. Leatherjackets seem to be especially attracted to the young and tender roots of grass, resulting in dead and brown patches in our lawns.

On vacant ground outdoors, a good defence is autumn and winter digging, for the birds feed greedily on leatherjackets exposed in freshly-turned soil. In the lawn the beds of perennial flowers or strawberries, the little beasts have to be poisoned, and this may be done either in the fall or along about the middle of April.

Almost any of the recognized soil insecticides will do the trick. One government recommendation is for either 25 percent liquid DDT or 25 percent aldrin emulsion, 1½ ounces (3 tablespoons) per gallon of water, and 3 gallons per 1,000 square feet, applied with a watering can or sprayer at a time when the soil is already moist to a good depth. I have been using chlordane emulsion against lawn moth and to discourage earthworms—and thereby moles—and it seems to do a good job against leatherjackets as well. I mix the chlordane with water at the rate of 2 tbsps per gallon when applying with a watering can, or 4 tbsps per quart when using a hose-end sprayer.

ERMA BOMBECK Goes to Bat for 'Moms'

Homemakers Also Serve

It is very chi chi these days, name on every volunteer list. It is inconceivable to many that she could find a grain of happiness in keeping house and raising a family.

There are thousands of women who are built physically and emotionally to handle two careers well. These women have a responsibility to their family, their skills and themselves to use these talents.

But what about the "Moms" of the world with talents not so glamorous nor so obvious who are being swept under the rug with psychological "Who Am I?" hogwash and fast-talked into psychosis they can't even spell!

Today, "Mom" is losing ground. She has to have an excuse for staying home, or worse, compensate by "putting her name on every volunteer list. It is inconceivable to many that she could find a grain of happiness in keeping house and raising a family.

They escape from four walls and feel more like a human being for it. They charge that the dullness of housework will eventually lead to drink and disenchantment, that Moms will be rewarded for their years of work and self-sacrifice by children who visit at mealtimes on Sundays and a husband who doesn't visit that often.

The women at home fire a volley of equally unfounded charges. "Our children and husbands are neglected. You think only of yourself and your own needs. And you probably don't even from your own sheets any more."

Now, herein lies the fallacy.

Instead of attacking, the Mom who works at home should respond with a few of her job assets.

"I tried a new recipe the other day. I like to test after a gentle breeze has dried them. I love the smell of yeast bread in the house when its snowing outside. I enjoy sewing and painting when the mood hits me. This house is spotless. I like to watch the kids when I take cookies out of the oven. I'm a skilled homemaker and I'm good at it!"

Working Mothers and Stay-at-home Mothers are uncomfortable together. Each feels a twinge that perhaps they're not doing the right thing. It's high time both groups came to understand and appreciate that each woman must make a life for herself in her own way.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

'Time Is Now Right'

PARIS (NANA)—Melina Mercouri and Jules Dassin will marry in Athens just as soon as they complete their present picture in Madrid, 10:30 P.M. Summer. They will honeymoon in Tahiti. "It's time," said Jules with the most exquisite understatement of the year. They have been engaged for eight years. They met 11 years ago at a Cannes film festival. Why the long wait? Well, for one thing, they were both married. Both divorced their respective mates two years ago. But more important for them, said Jules, "Everything between us has been so perfect, we didn't want to change things. But the time is now right. We will marry in Greece—where else?—and my children will be present."

Peter Sellers had a surprise for his wife Britt Ekland's birthday—a 14-foot cake, out of which Peter stepped in a $3,000 minicar, a present for Britt. It was a real cake and a real car.

What do Gregory Peck, Kirk Douglas and Gert (Goldfinger) Frobe have in common? They all married girl reporters who entered the golden ring of matrimony by interviewing them. We all know about Anne Douglas, blonde and beautiful, and Veronique Peck, brunette and beautiful. But now you must know about Mrs. Frobe, youngish, chlo and devoted to her monumental mate, whom she describes as "a very nice man, very tender, he's a dream." Goldfinger?

We had dinner at what is supposed to be the most popular restaurant in Paris, Allard, pere et fils. It's small, you have to wait three weeks for a reservation, and if you like well cooked, solid food, this is it. I had wanted to meet Frobe, who was so brutal in Goldfinger, and who is now playing the German general, von Choltz, in Is Paris Burning? He really was a dream and very tender and very even.

Goldfinger, by the way, will have earned $5,000,000, the first time around, giving a profit to the producers, Saltzman and Broccoli, of nearly $8,000,000 each. "And how much did you receive for the picture?" I asked Frobe. "$50,000," he replied, and then, with a grin, said "Mr. Saltzman called my agent and said he wants me to be in the next James Bond production, On Her Majesty's Secret Service. 'And how much will you pay him?' my agent asked. They decided to be generous. 'The same as we paid him for Goldfinger,' Saltzman replied. Look, I was killed in Goldfinger. To bring me back to life, they'll have to pay me much, much more."

Frobe's role in Is Paris Burning? is one of the most important in the picture, which has an all-star cast, including Jean Paul Belmondo, Charles Boyer, Leslie Caron, Alan Delon, Glenn Ford, Kirk Douglas, Yves Montand, Tony Perkins and Orson Wells. Frobe plays the general whom Hitler appointed to destroy Paris before the Allies could enter. Von Choltz was a most loyal general, but when it came to destroying the most beautiful city in the world, he refused to carry out the orders. General Choltz is still alive and interested in the picture based on the best seller by Larry Collins and Dominique Lapierre.

Confusion Compounded

By SYDNEY HARRIS

Do you know the difference between "contrary" statements and "contradictory" statements? Or do you imagine it's just playing with words, merely a semantic distinction with no practical application?

It can be shown, I think, that much of our confusion and conflict over political and social matters arises from our inability to distinguish between statements that are "contrary" and those that are "contradictory." I don't mean that better logic alone would change our opinions; but it would make us look elsewhere in support of them.

"The wall is black" and "the wall is red" are contrary statements; that is, they cannot be true together. But they can be false together—the wall might be green, neither black nor red. The falsity of one statement ("the wall is black") does not imply the truth of the other.

"The wall is black" and "the wall is not black" are contradictory statements; that is, they cannot be false together and they cannot be true together. The truth of one implies the falsity of the other, and vice versa. They are mutually exclusive terms; there is nothing in between them.

What we do, however, in much of our political and social talk, is to take contrary statements and turn them into contradictions, so that we get what the semanticists call a "two-value orientation."

The two statements: "Communism is the best system" and "Capitalism is the best system," are contraries, not contradictions. It is not possible for both statements to be true together, but both may be false together. Another system, combining their elements, might be better than either communism or capitalism.

But if we take these contraries as contradictions, then we are automatically against everything the Communists are for, and for everything they are against—even when they happen to be against the right things for the wrong reasons.

If we adopt such a posture, then no real communication or co-operation is at all possible. It is one of the worst faults of Marxist ideology, indeed, that it does adopt such a posture.

Each side denies that there can be more than one other side—and this denial is the essence of the "two-valued orientation," which is shared by Nazis, Communists, and the radical right. They are all somehow incapable of seeing that the wall may be neither black nor red, and that the falsity of their opponent's position does not imply the truth of theirs.

Oversimplification is one of the most dangerous attitudes facing us. This is especially so in our complex and inter-related modern society. It is tempting to look for simple answers, but when we turn a contrary into a contradictory, we make it impossible for an answer to correspond to reality, or to find any solution in reasonable terms.

Oak Bay Noise Level Echoed at Council

There was more noise on the Esplanade 12 to 14 years ago than there is now, Mrs. D. E. Pite of 2570 Esplanade, told Oak Bay council's B committee on traffic Wednesday.

Mrs. Pite, a resident of Esplanade for the past 16 years, was one of 18 residents of the area to speak to the committee on the noise problem along the Esplanade.

Oak Bay council has applied to the Capital Improvement District Commission for $40,000 for extension of the Esplanade onto Beach Drive.

FUNDS PROVIDED

The Esplanade was built with funds provided by the commission.

"The last time we had any real noise was graduation night of 1963," Mrs. Pite said, "when the youngsters threw a big party."

TIRE SQUEAL

Arthur Hall of 2710 Thorpe said his home was located directly in front of the turn-around and that "young lads" would turn their cars around, stop, then step on the gas, leaving with a loud squeal of tires.

"We aren't concerned with the cars going by," he said. "They don't make much noise. It is the noise made by the tires of the lads who are showing off in front of the girls."

"If the Esplanade was extended right through to Beach Drive, they wouldn't be interested in coming back," he said.

Suggestions that a parking lot be built in Uplands Park and a boardwalk be built to the Esplanade; that the Esplanade be turned into a playground, and that a parking lot be built in Willows Park were also heard.

Dr. L. L. Ptak of 2875 Beach asked how the proposed extension would affect his taxes. He said he was pleased to see the beach well used, but felt the extension would only extend the dragstrip.

POLICE CAR

Oak Bay Police Chief Robert Smith said he favored the extension because it would be easier to patrol and would enable emergency vehicles to enter the Esplanade if needed.

Committee chairman Douglas Watt pointed out the chief did not dare send one of the police cars on the Esplanade during the summer because "it would not be able to get out if needed."

PARTIES OUT

"Last summer was the worst it had ever been," the chief said.

"We couldn't get an emergency vehicle if it was needed at any time on weekends, and sometimes during the week."

The chief said much noise had been cut out from the beach with the elimination of late-night parties.

Quit 'Weed' Class Starts

Long wind, unstained fingers, an ash-free tee and pink lung tissue can be yours starting next week when another course begins for would-be non-smokers.

The five-night group therapy course is sponsored by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church. In 1964 it helped about two-thirds of a class of 50 to quit the weed. Group therapy, lectures, films and even a buddy system are part of the course. It is not a religious program.

Classes begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Dominion Room of the Dominion Hotel.

Night Program Needed New Centre Jumping From Start

By A. H. MURPHY

The Senior Citizens' Activity Centre, in Centennial Square, has been a smash hit since the day it opened in September.

Some of the other components of the square—the restaurant, for example, or the parking building which is not yet opened, or the shopping arcade which is not all rented—may have been dragging their feet, but the old folk's building has been jumping from the day the door opened.

So much, in fact, that it is already beginning to get that sardine-in look.

However, Mrs. Catherine Horne, the director, isn't worried. She is prepared to start a night program if that is the only way to look after people.

The program day now begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 4 p.m.

"What we may have to do," says Mrs. Horne, "is have an evening program for the 'kids'."

Accommodating the "kids" (between 65 and 75 years of age) in the evening would leave more room for the two older groups (75-to-85 and 85-and-over) during the day.

Operated by the Silver Threads Service, the centre offers an amazingly varied program—a schedule which reflects the wide interests of the 3,000 registered members.

If the term "senior citizen"—which many of them heartily detest—conjures up a picture of a wrinkled, white-haired old body sitting in a corner knitting a shawl, then you couldn't be more wrong.

Among the activities in progress down in Centennial Square are handicrafts including painting, weaving, paper mache, quilting, copper and leather work, ceramics and sewing.

The weekly schedule includes movies, live entertainment, choral singing and dancing—that's right, dancing. And there is the hard core of card-players. Daily they gather in the big west room of the building and there desperate battles are waged with no quarter given.

A good, hot noonday meal is an important feature of the daily routine. A full-course dinner is sold for 50 cents.

"If we can get one decent meal a day into many of these people, it keeps them on their feet much longer. Many of them have only a hotplate at home and that means they subsist on a diet of tea and toast. That midday meat-and-potatoes meal is very, very important," says Mrs. Horne.

The exodus begins about 3 p.m. The old people, some crippled, are anxious to get safely home before the rush hour. In twos and threes they start drifting away—the stronger helping the weaker and all busy talking at top speed.

By 4 p.m. the building is quiet for the first time since morning, and the cleaning staff moves in to prepare for a busy tomorrow.

Silver Threads Service is an agency of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria.

Suspect Jars Sold in City

Suspect jars of Borden's Malted Milk should be reported to the federal department of health and welfare food and drug division, Victoria's medical health officer said Thursday.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, head of the Metropolitan Board of Health, said some of the jars of plain malted milk product have been sold in Victoria and have not yet been recovered.

The jars sought have the code numbers 15147 and 15148 perforated on the label.

PHONE IN

Dr. Whitbread said the Metropolitan Board of Health has received many inquiries about the product.

"People with information should phone the food and drug division at EV 3-5553," he said.

Students Here For Conference

More than 40 Western Canadian university students will arrive in Victoria today for the annual western regional conference of Canadian University Press.

"As well as taking part in seminars and discussions, the delegates will decide on western policy to present to the National Conference at Christchurch," regional president Charles La Vertu said.

Linda

Airborne Miss Victoria Ready for Plane Race

Miss Victoria 1964—now learning to fly at Victoria Flying Club—is hoping to take part in next year's Powder Puff Derby from Seattle to Clearwater, Fla. "It's a thrilling idea," Linda Gower said Thursday night. "I soloed in August and should have my pilot's licence by Christmas."

Victoria Flying Club hopes to get local sponsors to enter the comely 20-year-old, budding bird-woman as a co-pilot with an American entrant in the derby.

The idea will be discussed Oct. 30 when Powder Puff pilots from Washington and Oregon come here for a luncheon in the Victoria Flying Club lounge at Patricia Bay Airport.

They are all members of the Far West Chapter of the International 99s, an organization of women pilots founded by Amelia Earhart. The name was chosen because there were 99 pilots at the first meeting.

The competition, officially called the All Women's Transcontinental Air Race, will start in Seattle July 2 and will end three days later in Clearwater. Next year's will be the 20th race.

This year, 71 aircraft finished after a 4½-day race from El Cajon, Calif., to Chattanooga, Tenn.

Greater Victoria needs a regional college to fill a gap between high school and university, says district school superintendent John Gough.

Even the regional vocational school planned for Victoria may not meet the need, said Mr. Gough Thursday in a report to a joint meeting of the three capital region school boards.

The report was prepared at the request of the boards, which have been working together for a regional college for more than a year.

Thursday's meeting voted to send tri-board chairman Lloyd Clarkson, together with Mr. Gough and the superintendents of Sooke and Saanich, to a conference with department of education officials.

CATER TO ADULTS

The school boards want a regional college to cater to adults returning to school as well as high school graduates. However, existing legislation restricts regional colleges to giving first and second-year university courses.

Mr. Clarkson and the superintendents will seek a broader interpretation of the legislation.

Additional regular repairs were undertaken while the ship was at VMD.

Gasoline in Drain 'Dynamite'

If you have to get rid of unwanted gasoline, don't pour it down a drain.

Oak Bay Fire Chief William Pearson passed on the warning Thursday night after his department had investigated an explosion that blew off a couple of manhole covers in the area of Pacific Shores apartments on Haultain.

He said it was fortunate no damage was done. The explosion occurred on the property at the rear of the apartment block, where parked vehicles were clear of the manholes.

Gasoline in a plugged-up surface or sewerage drain is suspected as the cause of the incident.

"People pour gas away without realizing the great hazard," Chief Pearson said. "There is no way for it to get out except through the manholes, and an explosion can be equivalent to two cases of dynamite."

"Why don't people use the gasoline for the cars?" he asked.

Colwood Sports Complex

Kiernan Offers Aid

By JACK FREY

Legislative Reporter

Recreation Minister Kiernan will help the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin area obtain 18 acres of defence department land for development of a major sports centre.

He said Thursday he has received correspondence from the defence department in Ottawa "indicating their willingness to seriously consider the proposal."

"I think we can work out something," said Mr. Kiernan, explaining that it is possible to give the site beside the Old Island Highway near Colwood Corner a Class C park status.

PLAN TO OTTAWA

Mr. Kiernan said he would submit his proposal to Ottawa this week.

He said the development plans submitted as a joint Colwood-Langford-Metchosin centennial project will require "a reasonably large area for construction of buildings and parking space."

"It's not too clearly defined in my mind what the first objective would be, but they will probably need a sports centre for such things as volleyball and basketball."

Stan Hisecock, spokesman for the area's joint centennial committee, said Thursday that "we envisage a complete recreational complex there in the future."

The first project, already approved in principle by the committee, may be a covered, heated swimming pool which would cost more than $100,000, he said.

"Combined centennial grants would cover a portion of the cost and 'we may form an improvement district to raise the rest by assessment,'" Mr. Hisecock said.

Election Notebook

What we have now is "summer" Pacific Standard Time. "Go by your watch," said area returning officers.

The watch-word holds true also for both days of the advance poll Oct. 30 and Nov. 1, despite the turning back of clocks one hour Oct. 31. Voting will be 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day.

What confusion exists would have been saved if no mention had been made of Pacific Standard Time.

NDP candidate J. Lloyd Breerton reports himself "whisked onto the floor" when he dropped in to visit the civic Senior Citizens' Centre. It was old-time dancing time at the centre Thursday afternoon.

A hootenanny will be held Monday night at the old Y building. Social Credit headquarters, and everyone's invited. Candidate Frank Hunter will be host as the young people present a concert with guitars, accordions and songs. Election meetings today: Victoria Conservative, Clifford Waite, 12:30 noon, Student Union Building.

Fresh apple knole—dumplings—float deliciously on a good hot vegetable soup. An excellent fall dish.

Goodness of Apples Known to Ancients

Hankering is one of those great old-fashioned words which says just what it means. For instance, before you, is a perfect apple—and suddenly you're wanting that apple with all your five senses. The eye sees its pristine bloom, its flashes of sparkling red, gold or pale green. "Heft" it and your sense of touch tells you that it is heavy with juiciness. As you bring it close you smell its waxy fragrance. Bite into it and you hear its crisp crackle. And, best of all, there is its fresh and delectable goodness.

Perhaps not apparent to the senses, but made evident in a feeling of well-being, are all the marvelous nutrients of apples. Long before there was a science of nutrition, people just knew that apples were good for them. That's why the apple is the healing fruit of Arabian tales; the rejuvenator of Norse mythology; the tree which grows on the legendary Avalon or Isle of Apples—"deep-meadowed, happy, fair with orchard lawns." It was here the mortally wounded King Arthur was taken to enjoy eternal bliss.

Modern scientific research has shown that fresh apples are "nature's toothbrushes," that they are good alkalies, that they have lowered high blood pressure in controlled experiments in which patients ate apples as the sole food for three day periods. They not only furnish bulk for good digestion, but also in some studies have been effective as a remedy for dysentery. As research continues, more of the excellent health values of apples are being revealed.

This year is a good apple year—an above average crop of 21,658,000 bushels is forecast by the Canada Department of Agriculture. This big apple barrel will be filled by these main varieties: Delicious, McIntosh, Golden Delicious, Rome, Jonathan, Winesap, York, Stayman, Cortland, Greening and Northern Spy.

Many of these will be eaten out of hand, simply and deliciously. Some you will want for recipes as good as these from the test kitchens of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

COUNTRY SOUP WITH APPLE KNOLE

One quarter cup beef marrow (2 lbs. beef bones), 1/2 cup cracker meal, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon double-acting baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon ground mace, 1 1/2 cups finely chopped apples, 2 large eggs, well beaten, 1/2 cup (3 strips) diced bacon, 1/2 cup finely chopped onion, 1/2 teaspoon finely chopped garlic, 2 medium-sized fresh tomatoes, 1 1/2 quarts rich beef stock or 6 cups water and 6 bouillon cubes, 2 cups shredded white cabbage, 1 cup shredded red cabbage, 2 cups diced tart cooking apples, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 whole clove, 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper.

Mix together until well blended the first 5 ingredients. Add apples, parsley and eggs, mixing until dough is formed. Refrigerate at least 1 hour or until mixture is firm. In the meantime fry bacon in a 2-quart saucepan until fat is rendered. Add onion and garlic; cook until onion is transparent and golden. Wash, peel, seed and dice tomatoes; add to onion mixture. Stir in stock, cabbage, apples and seasonings. Bring mixture to a boil; cover and simmer 15 minutes. Shape first mixture into 2-inch balls and drop into hot soup. Cover; simmer 15 minutes without lifting lid. Serve hot soup topped with knoles as a main course. If used as a first course, make apple knoles 1/2-inch in size. YIELD: 6 servings.

JELLIED CURRY APPLES

One cup water, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons curry powder, 1/16 teaspoon salt, 6 medium size baking apples, 1 teaspoon gelatin, 2 tablespoons water.

In a saucepan combine first five ingredients. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer three minutes. In the meantime wash and core the apples. Add 3 of the apples to the hot liquid. Cover and cook until nearly tender, 12 to 15 minutes. Turn to cook uniformly. Remove apples from syrup and cook remaining apples. As they are cooked, remove apples to a pan or casserole. Remove syrup from heat. Soften gelatin in the 2 tablespoons water and add hot syrup; stir to dissolve gelatin. Cool. When syrup begins to thicken spoon over apples and in cavities. Chill. Serve with pork, lamb or poultry. YIELD: six servings.

FRESH APPLE FROMAGE

Two lbs. tart cooking apples; 1/2 cup water; 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice; 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel; 1 cup sugar; 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped; 1 tablespoon macaroon crumbs.

Wash, peel and slice apples. Place in a saucepan with water. Cover and cook until apples fall apart. Put through a sieve. Add lemon juice and peel and sugar. Fold in whipped cream. Serve in sherbet glasses with one tablespoon macaroon crumbs sprinkled over each. To make macaroon crumbs heat macarons in a preheated moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 minutes. Cool. Roll between sheets of waxed paper to make crumbs. YIELD: eight servings.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I've read quite a lot about boys with long hair and how their parents can't stand it. I'll tell you how we handled the problem in our family.

Our 17-year-old son, Larry, decided he wanted to look like one of those singers. He used his haircut money to buy more records. Soon his hair was falling over his eyes in front and nearly reached his shoulder in back.

My husband announced at dinner that in his opinion anyone who wants to look like a dog ought to be registered. Yesterday he went to the Chicago city hall and bought our son a dog licence. Larry was registered as an Afghan male who answers to the name of "Ringo." My husband handed him the tag at the dinner table and said, "I think you ought to wear this."

Tonight Larry's hair is noticeably shorter. It was the best $2 my husband ever spent—CHICAGO MOM.

Dear Mom: Your letter is a gas—but it's a phony. In Chicago you can't get a dog licence unless you present a certificate from a veterinarian proving that your dog has had rabies shots.

I'm often asked how I can tell the fakes. Checking the facts is one way.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell us what to do about "night raiders." Our sons, Bobby and Tommy (4 and 5) share a room. Two weeks ago they started sneaking out of bed and going into the kitchen to search for goodies. They climb on chairs and help themselves to marshmallows, candy, cake and ice cream. There isn't anything they can't reach.

Both my husband and I have scolded the boys but it doesn't do any good. We decided to tie them in their beds with shopping harnesses but they put up such a fuss that we took the harnesses off after two sleepless nights.

Please tell us what to do, Ann.

—OUT MAEUVRE.

Dear Out: Remove their bedroom door and install a metal gate which can be opened only from the outside. This should end the night-raiding.

The central problem, however, is getting your kids under control. If you are unable to discipline them at the ages of 4 and 5, what do you propose to do when they are 14 and 15?

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old niece just told her mother she is four months pregnant. We are all in a state of shock. It's the first time anything like this has ever happened in our family. If Carol Lee could be married quietly it might help save the family name, but she doesn't know who the father is.

If you met Carol Lee you'd say she is a perfect lady—quiet, reserved and on the shy side. And that brings me to a point of this letter.

It's the sweet, innocent girl who has a baby out of wedlock branded as "bad?" The very fact that she gets into trouble is proof of her innocence. Please print this letter and back me up.

—CAROL'S AUNT.

Dear Aunt: Sorry but I don't have any good conduct medals lying around for sweet, innocent young things who get pregnant and don't know who the father is.

Maybe Carol Lee WAS sweet and innocent but you must agree that somewhere along the line her status changed.

Not many coho are coming from Sooke waters these days, but what there have been have been as heavy as 18 pounds.

Cowichan Bay has been slow, but on Wednesday Bud Dunnett and Paul Jones picked up a couple of bright coho which led them to think there may be a new run entering the bay.

Bruce Colegrave picked up a 16-pounder, his ambition for the year.

In Alberni Inlet, Underwood Cove is still giving up tyees and that means King Fisherman anglers still have a chance to win a Tyee Prince Button.

Strachan Wins Equal Time For Broadcast

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan has won the backing of the Board of Broadcast Governors in a fight with a Vancouver radio station which broadcasts regular interviews with Premier Bennett.

Station CKWX has been broadcasting every Saturday morning a half-hour interview of the premier by ex-Vancouver mayor Tom Alsbury.

RULED PARTISAN
The BBG has ruled that the broadcasts are "partisan political programs" and that other political parties can have equal time on the station if they wish.

And that is exactly what Mr. Strachan intends to do.

He said Thursday he had asked NDP provincial secretary Ernest Hall of Vancouver to request of radio station CKWX that "equivalent time be made available to us."

The BBG letter to Mr. Strachan stated:

"There is no doubt that the interviews broadcast are in fact partisan political programs, and the board has so ruled."

"In view of this situation, the station must provide similar time to any political party wishing it. The format of the presentation which the other parties choose shall be at their own discretion."

"The regulations of the board say that time must be distributed on an equitable basis between all political parties, and the board has consistently ruled that, if you let one party on the air, you must provide similar time to others."

BREACH POSSIBLE
The BBG letter also informed Mr. Strachan that if the radio station fails to allocate equitable time to all parties seeking it, the action will be considered "a breach of the regulations and hence of its conditions of licence."

INDUSTRIAL ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION LIMITED

It's going to be a cold winter.
Dress lightly.

You don't have to weigh yourself down during cold winters. Stanfield's fine cotton rib underwear weighs ounces, but keeps you warm all winter long. And the pullover-style short sleeve shirt (1411) has a patented nylon-reinforced neckband* that keeps its shape. In S.M.L. ... it's yours for about $2.50. You can have the elastic-waist double-seat longs (1412) in sizes 30-40 for about $2.95. Boys' shirts are around $1.50, the longs around $1.95. Also in combinations, long or short sleeves. And you can dress even lighter in Stanfield's "5000" line for men. (50% fine combed cotton and 50% English wool.)

*Exclusive with Stanfield's in Canada.

Demonstrators Challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Wallace M. Greene Jr., commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps, wants demonstrators against U.S. policy in Viet Nam to prove their sincerity by volunteering for civilian humanitarian programs in Southeast Asia.

"Let them prove themselves as good Samaritans by crossing the road to lift up their brothers, to tend the sick, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to shelter the homeless," he told the Defence Supply Association's national convention Wednesday.

ALTERNATIVE

"Let them do this first, rather than pass by on the other side of the street, with a placard on their shoulder, a sign on their lips and hypocrisy in their hearts."

The same day Greene issued this challenge, the Students for a Democratic Society said draft age men should be given an alternative of some form of public service, such as the 500 to march in Oklahoma City Saturday in support of administration policy. Last Saturday some 20 of the university's students demonstrated against U.S. action in Viet Nam.

At the University of Mississippi in Oxford, the campus senate adopted a strong resolution of support of administration policy and condemned demonstrations against it.

In Huntsville, Ala., the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post began Operation Sweet Tooth to show support for Americans fighting in Viet Nam by sending them packages of home-made candy and cookies.

In Sacramento, Calif., California Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh said there will be a legislative crackdown on the University of California if the Berkeley campus continues to be "a staging area, a fountainhead" for the demonstrations.

At Michigan State University, junior William Webb said about 3,500 students and faculty members have signed petitions supporting U.S. policies.

BACK U.S. POLICY

Meanwhile, plans for counter-demonstrations continued to build in answer to last week-end's anti-war marchers.

At New Haven, Conn., a group of Yale students called for attendance at a mass rally today to demonstrate backing for U.S. policy.

University of Oklahoma students said they expected about 100 to march in Oklahoma City Saturday in support of administration policy. Last Saturday some 20 of the university's students demonstrated against U.S. action in Viet Nam.

FBI Probing Draft Defiance

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — FBI Thursday was investigating the burning of a draft card by a University of Iowa junior whose father is a retired naval officer.

Steve Smith, 20, a red-bearded civil rights worker with two brothers in the armed forces, burned his draft card Wednesday during an open-forum meeting at the university. He said his action was meant as a protest of U.S. involvement in the Viet Nam war.

There are not many 95-

Canadians suffer from the opposite, too many push-

most of the physical weaknesses come from the overly-blubbered, the puffed and the flabby, who seldom do more exercise than drive the car around

Yet it's not hard to get back in good physical condi-

Heavy Winds Delay Ship Rescue

PLYMOUTH, England (AP)—The British ship Londoner reached the crippled 7,184-ton Liberian vessel Tradeways II early today, but reported she was unable to lower lifeboats to help.

The Londoner radioed that because of 35-knot winds, she would wait for daylight before beginning operations. The report said men were sighted on the deck of the stricken Montreal-bound ship and one of the Tradeways's lifeboats was in the water. The 441-foot Liberian ship radioed Thursday night she was taking water and breaking up 700 miles off Land's End. There was no word of how many men were aboard.

The RAF coastal command here said a plane was ready at Ballykelly, Northern Ireland, to fly to the Tradeways if needed. The freighter, formerly known as the Amilla, was en route from Antwerp, Belgium, to Montreal.

City Tug Fighting Huge Seas, Gales

A distress message from a Greek freighter has sent the Victoria-based tug Sudbury II off on a rescue mission.

Last given position of the propellerless freighter Ekaterini G. was 2,400 miles west of Cape Flattery, and roughly half way between Adak in the Aleutians and Midway Island.

Huge seas and gale winds were reported by both Sudbury II and an Adak-based navy tug which has a line aboard the freighter and is standing by.

HEAVY SWELL

The Sudbury's captain late Thursday reported running into a heavy northeast swell and a strong northeast wind slowly increasing.

The Ekaterini G. was on her way to Vancouver in ballast to pick up a load of wheat when high seas lifted her too high too often, and she threw her propeller.

RECORD TOW

World record salvage tow of 3,400 miles was set a few years ago by Island Tug's Sudbury I, after the freighter Makedonia threw her propeller.

Propeller-towing time in the northern Pacific usually extends through the gale seasons from September to March and an Ice-Continued on Page 3

Nearest Operator in Nanaimo

EMERGENCY MIXUP ANGERS ALBERNIS

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — A frantic mother dialed "O" for operator to call out the inhalator for her one-month-old son, and Nanaimo fire department rushed to answer the call.

The emergency was in Port Alberni. The baby was dead when it was finally rushed to West Coast General Hospital by the mother, Wednesday night.

Dead is Wayne Amede Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Frank, 902 Bruce, Port Alberni.

With direct-distance dialing there is no longer a telephone operator in the Albernis.

When Mrs. Frank dialed "O" there is no longer a telephone operator to an operator in Nanaimo.

AFRAID OF THIS

Since there is a Bruce Street in Nanaimo, the operator called out the Nanaimo inhalator.

"Ever since they took the operators out of Port Alberni I've been afraid some emergency like this might come up," said Mayor Les Hammer.

'WE'D BE CUT OFF'

"What would happen if we had another tidal wave, and the lines to Nanaimo were down?" asked the mayor. "We would be completely cut off."

Fire chief Maurice Smith said "We will not know until a post mortem whether our department could have saved the child, had we known about it."

He said the emergency system in the valley is inadequate.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

"The system here might be all right for a village of 3,000, but it's just not good enough for an area where close to 20,000 are concerned," he said.

Emergency numbers are different in Alberni, Port Alberni, and Cherry Creek.

The fire chief said he has tried to impress Port Alberni

Copter, Plane Escape Craft

BERNAU, Germany (UPI)—A former Czech air force captain escaped to West Germany Thursday night by helicopter, landing it in a U.S. army recreation area, an army officer said.

U.S. military personnel stared pop-eyed when the refugee put his Czech airplane down on a parking lot in the army's Chiemsee Lake recreation area near the West German-Austrian border. He identified himself as Jan Nemec.

Nemec's escape came almost simultaneously with the flight of a 23-year-old East German aircraft mechanic who stole a collective farm spray-plane in Mecklenburg and flew it to Katzenburg in Schleswig-Holstein. He said it was a "miracle" because he had never flown a plane before.

Up-Coast Torrent

Isolated Village Rides Out Flood

KINGCOOME INLET, B.C. (CP)—Late reports are "optimistic" evacuation of this remote logging village hit by flooding may not be necessary.

"We have every reason to believe that flooding is on the wane," Attorney-General Bonner said Thursday night.

"There appears to be no present need for evacuation."

HEAVY RAINS

The Kingcome River, swollen by near torrential rains that hit the coastal region 220 miles northwest of Vancouver, rampaged over its banks at the head of the long inlet.

Muddy water swirled past houses, most built on stilts along the riverbank, and rose above floors.

100 PEOPLE

Mr. Bonner said about 100 persons live in the village. He said he did not want to rely on sketchy reports and had requested some seaborne craft to remain in the vicinity until scene overnight.

COULD BE PROBLEM

He said there "could be a problem" if there was a heavy rain overnight.

"An RCMP plane is standing by to pass over the area at first light," he said.

RCMP patrol boats and the Canadian Coast Guard vessel Ready were proceeding to the scene overnight.

'True Revolutionaries'

Castro's Objective: Distill Population

MIAMI (UPI)—Premier Fidel Castro says he is letting Cubans leave the island because he wants to distill Cuba's population to "true revolutionaries, true socialists, true Communists."

Castro, in a surprise speech marking Cuba's first national track and field games Thursday, reiterated his "open door" policy for Cuban refugees first proclaimed Sept. 28.

"Again we say that the policy of this government is that anyone who does not wish to live here can leave," said Castro, whose speech was monitored in Miami.

EXPULSION NO ONE

"We are expelling no one, for we expel no one born in this land, but we are giving facilities to all those who do not wish to live here."

"We are doing this because we want to create a society of men and women who are true revolutionaries, true socialists, true communists," said Castro.

'Old man of sea' arrives in Florida

Biggest Day Yet In Cuban Exodus

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—A parade of small boats pouring out of Cuba brought more than 300 refugees across the gulfstream to freedom today, among them a 6-day-old boy and a wizened "old man of the sea."

It was the heaviest influx on any one day since the do-it-yourself exodus began with the first boat arrival two weeks ago in response to Castro's Sept. 28 announcement of an "Open Door" policy to rid his island of discontented persons.

The weather-beaten 92-year-old Anselmo Hernandez claims he was the fisherman who inspired the Pulitzer Prize novel "The Old Man and the Sea," written by the late Ernest Hemingway. Grizzled Anselmo said he met Hemingway 20 years ago, adding they had remained good friends until the author's death.

Refugees told of preparations at Varadero, which has become a refugee embarkation point, for a mass airlift of emigrants.

Never Will Be

No Deals Says John D

By RON COLLISTER
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

BROCKVILLE, Ont. — Conservative leader John Diefenbaker bombed and buried persistent speculation that a "deal" on the leadership caused the avalanche of pre-election unity in the party.

"There were no deals," he told a crowd of 1,200 here. "There never will be as long as I am leader of the party."

RESIGNATION

Bertha Eboe, Social Credit candidate in Cariboo constituency, said Thursday that Conservative leader Diefenbaker has submitted his resignation, dated July, 1967, to the Conservative party.

"The only reason former Conservative cabinet ministers are returning to the Conservative fold is to get another crack at the leadership," he told a Castro, Alta., audience.

HONEST DIFFERENCES

Talking freely about the troubles that broke up his cabinet early in 1963, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"We were disgusted over the nuclear deal. Honest men have

'Malicious'

Pearson Hits 'Inventions'

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson lashed back Thursday night at Opposition charges of corruption in his government, calling them "insinuation and misrepresentation" and "malicious invention."

He said organized crime has made attempts to influence the work of government but "organized crime has failed in those attempts."

The prime minister, speaking on a CBC free-time television broadcast, said one "glaring example" of misrepresentation has been in connection with killings in Quebec by an organized criminal ring.

NO EVIDENCE

"The ring was involved in arson; there is no evidence at all to connect it with bankruptcy cases. Yet you have been told that the killings might have been prevented if a report on bankruptcy received by the federal government had been published."

"There is not a scrap of evidence to support the charge. The alleged report doesn't even exist. It is pure invention. No, not pure invention; malicious invention."

Referring to the Lucien Rivard case, he said it is a serious one that "has worried me more than anything I have ever experienced."

Log Kills Chokerman

CHEMUNUS — James Markie, 48, Crofton, a chokerman, died when he was crushed by a log at 3:45 p.m. Thursday at MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. Copper Canyon operation, 25 miles west of here.

To Rhodesia at Weekend

Wilson Set to Go

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI)—British Prime Minister Harold Wilson will fly here this weekend in a dramatic attempt to stave off a unilateral declaration of independence by white-ruled Rhodesia.

Wilson offered in London Thursday to fly personally to Salisbury to resume negotiations broken off earlier this month.

Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith said after a cabinet meeting this afternoon he would meet with Wilson.

"I will reserve the whole of the coming weekend for our discussion," Smith said.

A few hours later Smith appeared on a nation-wide television program and said Britain must make concessions if it hopes to dissuade Rhodesia from declaring independence.

"There is no possibility of solving this unless the British government sees a little bit of reason, a little bit of light and are prepared to come towards us," Smith said. "If they move away then there is no hope of solving our problems."

When Wilson will leave London is not known.

Network Pulls NDP's Plug

TORONTO (CP) — The New Democratic Party complained Thursday the CTV television network and some individual TV stations rejected a 60-second NDP commercial, part of the party's extensive telecasting in the federal general election.

Faxon Park, national NDP president, said at a press conference he considered the network and stations were violating the principle of free speech and that "the affinity of stations to the advertising industry" was a factor in the rejection.

The commercial showed a supposed housewife registering disappointment at the failure of an unidentified product to live up to its TV billing, with an announcer's voice promising an NDP government would protect shoppers.

CTV issued a statement

saying the commercial was an indiscriminate and unsupported attack on all TV advertising and was presented in a misleading manner. It would have been rejected if a regular commercial sponsor had submitted it, and the network did not believe sponsorship by a political party justified "relaxation in our standards of responsible advertising practice."

Mr. Park contended the substance of the advertisement was accurate and said its content had been cleared with a Board of Broadcast Governors lawyer before being filmed. However, the NDP did not plan a protest to the BBG. Manny Dunskey, head of the Montreal advertising firm that produced it, conceded the stations had the right to reject any advertising material.

He said the CBC used it here Wednesday night, and a number of individual TV stations also have used it.

Dogs and Gas Used on Mob

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Argentine police used tear gas and dogs in clashes with industrial workers who staged a mass walkout in Buenos Aires and its suburbs Thursday. Fights broke out in six places, and gunfire was reported in one area. The strike was in protest against a government claim p down on union political activity.

Port Alice Gets Pavement

PORT ALICE—Highways department has let a contract for paving four miles of road from old Port Alice to the new townsite at Rumble Beach and on to June Landing.

The contracts, for $200,310, went to Columbia Bitulthie Ltd., Vancouver.

Comox Pilots Join Big Blast Echo Run

COMOX — RCAF aircraft took part overnight Thursday in a NORAD training exercise about 30,000 feet over B.C., Western Washington and Oregon and Northern California.

Duncan Logger Killed

PORT RENFREW — A 23-year-old Duncan logger was killed near here Thursday morning, when a log slipped off a trailer and fell on him.

Harvey Paul Bennett, of Herd Road, was helping to load the trailer in a B.C. Forest Products logging area when the mishap occurred.

He was pronounced dead at the scene.

MANY LOGGERS

Harvey Bennett lived all his life in the Cowichan Valley, and started logging when he was 17.

His family earns its living from the woods. Older brother Bob, Duncan, is a sawmill employee; younger brother Malcolm, Mesachie Lake, works for Hillcrest Logging.

His father Stan Bennett was a logger until recently, when he became a civic employee at Duncan.

The dead man's brother-in-law Ray Manweiler, Youbou, is a sawmill employee.

He also leaves his mother, sisters, Mrs. Manweiler and Mrs. Delbert Lee, Courtenay, stepbrother Ralph Carson, Maple Bay, stepfather Mrs. Jack Craib, Duncan.

Socreds Switching?

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan Thursday invited the Cowichan-Newcastle Social Credit Association to come on over to his side in fighting for improvements to Cowichan Lake Road.

The Socreds group will inform Highways Minister Gagliardi the present condition of Cowichan Lake Road is "discrimination" against the constituency.

"I love that," said Mr. Strachan. "I think every member of the Social Credit party in Cowichan-Newcastle should resign from that party and join me in the fight for a fair deal for Cowichan."

Kindergarten Benefits Children, Teachers May Be Included in Qualicum School Program

PARKSVILLE — The Parent-Teacher Association here wants to know if there is any possibility the school board will include kindergarten as part of the school curriculum.

A recent panel discussion on this question was resolved with agreement that kindergarten is of benefit to the child, parents, and primary teachers.

The results of this panel will be sent to the school board. The panel said there are more children available for kindergarten than present facilities can handle, and in time this field will become part of the regular school program.

CAMPBELL RIVER — "Let's Macadamize northern Vancouver Island," say Tories in Comox-Alberni, linking their candidate's name with a process made famous by one of his ancestors.

Drive Softly --Parksville

PARKSVILLE — Drive, but drive quiet, is the watchword in Parksville.

Officials are fed up with deliberate noise-making by drivers.

Council will consider an amendment to the anti-noise by-law, to make the bylaw include squealing tires, excessive acceleration, and other offensive noises from vehicles.

MANY COMPLAINTS

Council took the matter up after many residents complained.

But residents aren't blaming the people who live here, most attribute the noise to motorists coming through on weekends.

FIREWORKS SOLD

The bylaw regarding Halloween fireworks was read out at a recent council meeting to remind the public, fireworks cannot be sold or set off in the village except during the week of Oct. 23 to 31.

Final reading was given to a bylaw to amend the zoning by-law to allow museums to be included in residential areas.

Council learned preparations are well underway for paving of the parking area at Parkville beach, but damp weather is holding up the project.

adam, head of a Campbell River airline, is a direct six-generation descendant of John Loudon Macadam (1756-1834).

J. L. gave his name to the system of road making known as Macadamizing.

He put his theories on road construction into practice in Bristol in 1819.

The success of his road construction led to his appointment as general surveyor of roads in the British Isles.

Conservative campaign officials hope the slogan will give publicity to the need for more hard-surface roads up-island.

NORTH COWICHAN — Council has decided to submit its centennial proposal, the development of municipal land at Fisher's Lake, to centennial officials, as the deadline for project submission approaches.

Reeve Donald Morson said to get the centennial grants from senior governments a project must be submitted soon.

The grants would be $15,000, matched by the municipality.

The application went forward as an alternate to the previously planned $300,000 arena, in case the voters reject the arena proposal.

A referendum on the arena will probably be held early next year.

NANAIMO — The new Forest Park Elementary School at Northfield opens today. It is a four-room school. Children in the area have been attending four nearby schools waiting for completion of the new school.

DUNCAN — Ald. Hamish Mitter hopes the high price of eggs will deter egg-eating pranksters this Halloween.

Ald. Jim Saunders said, "Eggs are a worse hazard at Halloween than fireworks."

Ald. Mitter said the price of eggs is up this year.

"Egg producers are getting 60 cents a dozen, so they will probably be on sale in stores for about 60 cents a dozen," he said.

Another alderman commented, "We can only hope five cents an egg is too expensive for an egg throw."

LADYSMITH — Brian Charles Deloourt was fined $175 and had his driver's licence lifted for six months after he pleaded guilty in police court to impaired driving. He will be allowed to drive to and from work only.

LAKE COWICHAN — Mrs. Jean St. Dennis and Mrs. Marg. McQuarrie have been appointed co-chairmen of the wreath committee of Kinetics. The making of Christmas wreaths is the club's main money-making project each year.

Kinetics make and sell 200 wreaths annually. This year wreath-making will begin Nov. 8. Children's Christmas party is set for Dec. 19.

Kinetics sent 50 pounds of clothing to the mental hospital at Riverview.

COURTENAY — A group of States." Mr. Barnett was joined by Mrs. Grace McInnis, NDP candidate for Vancouver-Kingsway, who asked the meeting to "look at the performance, look at the quality in the product, and look at the record of the party before you vote for your candidate."

15 Tough Rounds

Tiger Regains Boxing Crown

NEW YORK (AP)—Dick Tiger, a grim stalker from Nigeria, won back the world middleweight title he lost 22 months ago by whipping Joey Giardello decisively on a unanimous verdict Thursday night in 15 tough rounds.

A capacity crowd of 17,064 that paid $161,964 at Madison Square Garden saw the 36-year-old African open cuts around both of Giardello's eyes. Thumping a steady barrage on Giardello's body while bonzo drums beat a steady accompaniment in the background, Tiger piled up points but never was able to drop the veteran, who took the title from him Dec. 7, 1963, at Atlantic City, N.J.

FOUR CARDS AGREE

Referee Johnny Lo Bianco scored it 9-5-1 in rounds, judge Al Berl 10-5 and judge Tony Castellano 8-6-1, all for the Nigerian. The AP card had it 10-4-1 for Tiger.

Although Giardello had won nine straight during nearly three years and had beaten Tiger in two of three previous bouts, Tiger had gone into the ring as a 7-5 favorite. He had been a 3-1 choice when he lost at Atlantic City.

BATTLE-SCARRED

The 35-year-old, battle-scarred boxer from Cherry Hill, N.J., near Philadelphia, simply could not keep the Tiger from climbing all over him. Tiger, who weighed 158½ pounds to 160, started strongly, carried the battle to the American, and piled up such a wide lead that he was out of reach when Giardello started a late comeback.

Giardello closed with a rally that was too late and too little. Although he scored points, his punches had lost their zip. He would have needed a knockout to win it, but Joey hasn't knocked anybody out since 1961.

TIGER WAS SHARPER

Tiger was much sharper than in Atlantic City and slammed away to the body throughout the bout. Referee Lo Bianco did not rush in to break the boxers too quickly, and the body barrage often continued for several seconds.

Giardello, a master at the headfence, jab and sliding moves, was cut on the side of the left eye in the second and on the side of the right eye in the ninth. Although he was blood-smeared at times, the cuts never seemed to bother him.

SOLID EFFORT

Tiger's best weapon is his left hook, which he threw over and over again with solid effect. He crowded Joey to the ropes time after time and punished him as he switched from body to head and back to the body again.

When Giardello did put on his late spurt, the blows had no big punch and they bounced off Tiger's head like rain drops in a summer shower.

CROWD CHEERS

The big crowd rose and cheered in the 12th when Giardello, after absorbing a bad beating for two minutes, gamely fought back and stung the Nigerian and tried to slug it out with him.

It was obvious that Joey had gone to the well once too often. This was his 12th fight and his 23rd defeat to 98 wins. He fought seven draws and had one no-decision contest.

STARTED IN 1963

Tiger, who never has been stopped, now has a 52-14-3 record for 69 fights since he came out of Amaigbo, Orin province, in Nigeria and started fighting in 1952.

He won the title from Gene Fullmer, Oct. 23, 1962, defended it against Fullmer twice, once in Las Vegas, Nev., and once in Ibadan, Nigeria, before losing to Giardello in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Tribe Wins Turkey Tournery

Mrs. J. B. Tribe shot a net 73 to win the women's turkey competition at Uplands Golf Club, beating Mrs. G. M. Coxworth and Mrs. B. M. Blay by three strokes.

Darcus Cup winner was Mrs. W. V. Hicks, net 234. Runner-up was Mrs. Blay, net 235.

Back Woes Sideline Rod Gilbert

NEW YORK (AP)—Right wing Rod Gilbert, New York Rangers' leading scorer last season, entered a New York hospital for treatment of a back injury Thursday and will be lost to the National Hockey League team for about a week.

Team physician Dr. Kazuo Yanagisawa said Gilbert was suffering from muscle spasms at the base of the spine, and will be out of action one week to 10 days.

Gilbert, who has a history of back trouble and underwent an operation five years ago, scored 25 goals, 36 assists and 61 points for Rangers last season.

Ingarfield For Reggie?

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says New York Rangers and Boston Bruins are working toward a National Hockey League trade which could be completed by Monday.

The report says the Rangers, fifth in the standings last season, are negotiating to send centre Earl Ingarfield to the Bruins, who finished last, in exchange for Reggie Fleming, a hard-hitting winger who starred with Chicago Black Hawks before going to Boston last season.

Knife Victim Discovered

VANCOUVER (CP)—The body of a man who was stabbed twice was discovered Thursday beneath a pile of lumber and tin in the yard of a vacant house here.

Police surmised the man apparently had been beaten and stabbed, through the heart and through the back, and then taken to the yard.

They believe he had been dead for two or three days before the body was found.

Teachers Seek Extra Salary

VANCOUVER (CP)—Extra pay for teaching big classes and supervising lunch hours is sought by Vancouver secondary school teachers in current salary negotiations. They are asking a bonus of $1 a student for classes that exceed 35 students.

Barry Sadler Back in Goal For United Side

Victoria United will have Barry Sadler back in goal when it meets North Shore Luckies Saturday in their Pacific Coast Soccer League game at Royal Athletic Park.

Sadler, who spent last season with New Westminster Royals after three years with United, lives in Port Alberni and signed with United this season as a reserve goalkeeper. But Al Davies is unable to play this weekend, and United wants to give Sadler some action anyway, so he gets it Saturday.

It will be the second league start for United, whose other three games have been in the Anderson Cup competition. The league match ended 2-0 for UBC Thunderbirds.

LINEUP SET
Tony Quin and Len Anderson will be at fullback, with George Pauls, Bill Hamilton and Dave Stothard on the half line and Bert Souter at centre forward, flanked at inside by Ike McKay and Peter Goodwing. Jim Jamieson and Dunc McCaig will be on the wings, with Tom Locke, Russ Ball and Don McIntosh in reserve.

North Shore has played three league matches and has a draw and two losses. New Westminster plays Firefighters and Thunderbirds meet Burnaby Villa on the mainland Saturday, and Colubus plays St. Andrews Sunday.

Gorge and Navy will be going for a share of first place Sunday in the Victoria and District Soccer Association' first division, as league-leading Hourigan's Kickers draw a bye.

Gorge plays Luckies at Centra' Park and Navy takes on Victoria West at Royal Athletic Park. In the other first division game, it's Brodies and Scottish at Heywood Park.

Draft Dodger Given Prison Term

NEW YORK (UPI)—Robert Beersall, 19, his hair hanging nearly to his shoulders, stood impassively Wednesday as he was sentenced to three years in prison for refusing to take a physical exam for the draft.

"In my opinion," Judge John Cannella said, "he wants to be sentenced in order to be a martyr. If he does not get sentenced, he will be the most frustrated man on earth."

Beersall pleaded guilty to the charge. His lawyer asked the court to have the youth declared a conscientious objector. But assistant U.S. Atty. Paul Rooney said he was "contemptuous of the draft" and had refused to sign documents saying he was a conscientious objector.

During the session, several anti-draft pickets paraded outside the courthouse.

Eastern Division Scrambled

NFL Bench-Warmers Take Sunday's Spotlight

By JOE GERGEN
UPI Sports Writer

Two quarterbacks who spent the greater part of their National Football League careers on the bench are expected to receive the opportunity Sunday to unscramble the complicated eastern division race.

Earl Morrall of the New York Giants and Louie (Buddy) Humphrey of the St. Louis Cardinals are the signal-callers whose success or failure could spell the difference in the final standings this season.

Morrall, acquired from the Detroit Lions prior to the start of the campaign, will definitely open for the Giants against the defending NFL champion Cleveland Browns while Humphrey may get his first starting nod against the Washington Red skins due to a shoulder injury to the Cards' regular signal-caller, Charley Johnson.

The games are vital in the eastern division scramble since the Browns and Cards are deadlocked for first place with 4-1 records while the Giants are only one game back at 3-2.

Cleveland is an eight-point choice and St. Louis is favored by 13.

Green Bay rates a 14-point spread over the Dallas Cowboys, who defeated the Packers in a pre-season exhibition game, and the Baltimore Colts are considered 17 points better than the Los Angeles Rams in the key games involving western division clubs.

The Chicago Bears are favored by six to whip visiting Detroit, San Francisco holds a slim two-point edge in its home encounter with Minnesota and the Eagles are a seven-point choice over the Pittsburgh Steelers at Philadelphia.

Morrall, now in his 10th pro season, was acknowledged as one of the league's outstanding "relief pitchers" during stints with the Forty-Niners, Steelers and most recently the Lions.

He has gained that security with the Giants, who have only inexperienced quarterbacks behind him, and the results have been impressive.

FAN FARE

By WALT DITZEN

Will Eddie Shack Be a Sideshow?

If Toronto Maple Leafs are planning to make a sort of a sideshow out of colorful Eddie Shack by having him shuttle between their three professional farm clubs, they haven't even hinted at it to the Victoria Maple Leafs, manager Buck Houle says.

A story, written by a Toronto newspaperman and appearing yesterday in a Vancouver newspaper reported that Shack is to be used as a drawing card for Victoria in the Western Hockey League and Tulsa in the Central league as well as with Rochester in the American league.

BOOSTS CROWDS
Shack is currently with Rochester, the story said, because the Rochester club plays 10 of its home games this season in Maple Leaf Gardens and the Toronto management feels that his presence in the Rochester lineup will boost attendance for the AHL games set in Toronto.

This, the Toronto correspondent carried on, led to the thinking that Shack would also help fill arenas in Victoria and Tulsa.

"This," said Victoria manager Buck Houle last night after being apprised of the report, "is something I haven't heard and I don't believe that it will happen.

Rollicking Winger May Shuttle

"I don't think that Shack would consent to this and I don't think that they would ask him to do it. Shack is a pretty good hockey player and a real drawing card wherever he plays but I don't think he's a freak."

However, as matters stand at the moment, Victoria fans should at least get to see Shack play once this season. Rochester is scheduled for an interlocking game at Memorial Arena on Feb. 26.

Meanwhile, the Victoria club got down to its allotted strength yesterday by sending winger Ed Ehrenverth to Tulsa.

REGULAR CAST

The move leaves coach Frank MacIvor with two goalkeepers, five defencemen and 11 forwards, including rookie Marty Desmarais. "That sets our lineup," Houle said. "I don't anticipate any changes in the near future."

Season Opens Saturday

Chinooks on Top And They Like It

There's a good reason why Ollie Goldsmith isn't worried about complacency striking down his Victoria Chinooks. It's a little thing called pride.

Chinooks, who open the Inter-City Junior Basketball League season against Vancouver YMCA Saturday night at Central Junior High School, are Canadian champions. And they're sure of a spot in the Canadian tournament again this year no matter where they finish in the league, because they are the host club.

IN FRONT DOOR

But they aren't looking any further than the league right now. When they go into that Canadian tournament they want to go in the front door with heads up as league champs, not sneak in the back way as a beaten club that made it only as hosts.

Besides, Chinooks know all about complacency and how it can hit you.

Two seasons ago, in the club's rookie year, Chinooks breezed to the league title while losing only one game. Then they were wiped out in straight games in the semi-finals. They learned from that one, and last year they went all the way to the top. The trick now is to stay there.

SIX RETURN

Chinooks figure they've got the material to do it, with six members of last year's club back in the lineup and some promising newcomers ready to fill in the blank spots.

Returnees are guards Ken Jackson, Rick Humbler and Doug Gregory, and forwards Ron Bowker, Barney Spaven and Don Frampton. Bowker and Jackson are both third-year men and expected to be the two big men this season.

NEWCOMERS

The newcomers are Barry Burch, a 6'3" forward who was with Esquimalt Dockers in the B.C. high school tournament; Brian Brumwell, 6'4" centre and graduate of Mount View High; Brian McIntyre, 6'3" forward from Esquimalt, and Barry Turner, 5'10" guard who was first string with Oak Bay High's B.C. champs last year.

From these new players Chinooks must find replacements for all-stars Ken Gregory and John Lauvass, last year's league scoring champ.

TO TAKE OVER?

Brumwell, a 218-pounder who turned down two U.S. college scholarships (Western Washington and Peninsula College) is considered the player to take over Gregory's spot at centre.

Chinooks' first test, against YMCA tomorrow night, starts at 8:30, with a preliminary bantam game, Esquimalt vs. St. Louis College, at 7:15.

Quebec outshot the Bears 39-19.

Bauman Gets First Shutout

QUEBEC (CP)—Gary Bauman recorded his first shutout of the young American Hockey League season as Quebec Aces blanked Hershey Bears 5-0 before 3,710 fans Thursday night.

Aces scored twice in the first period and added three markers in the final.

Aces scorers were Bill Sutherland, Don Blackburn, Leon Rochefort, Cleland Mortson and Gordon Labossiere.

Quebec outshot the Bears 39-19.

Blades Recall Goalie Marcel

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Los Angeles Blades of the Western Hockey League announced Thursday they have recalled goalie Marcel Pelletier to play in the opener against Baltimore of the American Hockey League tonight. The Blades had earlier optioned Pelletier to St. Paul of the Central League.

Ferry Without Cook

Mutas Home Popular Place as 25 Stranded by Floods

By JOY HUNTLEY
SAYWARD — Everybody descended on Mrs. Thelma Mutas at once . . . a cook laden with food, a basket of people, a speaker wondering how he was going to get to a meeting, and this reporter.

Mrs. Mutas really hadn't done anything to deserve all the attention. She lives in a lonely house nine miles south of the ferry wharf at Sayward. Between her home and the community of Sayward, there were four flooded spots on the road, and traffic north came to a halt. The bus stopped. The school at Sayward closed, waiting for its principal. And the ferry was halted at the dock, waiting for its cook. The cook was carrying food to feed the passengers. But then, the passengers were on the bus that was stopped by the flood too, so there we were. About 25 people stopped by the flooding of the Salmon River, which spilled over its banks Thursday, and covered sections of the old road. The new modern highway becomes the old road when it drops down into the valley south of Sayward.

Mrs. Mutas chatted with many drivers during the afternoon and evening, some were disgusted, and turned back to Campbell River.

When the river rose earlier in the day, a small new car tried to make it through two feet of water.

It was washed into the ditch, and two boys in a rowboat had to rescue the driver, John Chalmers, and his son. As he was rowed away from the car by Bob Smith and Nathan Tinkham, he noted sadly the half-sunk car had only 7,400 miles on the odometer.

Road foreman Ed Hansen said the flooding is regular, and recently the road was flooded three times in two weeks. School principal F. B. Shout was living in a trailer at Sayward until it burned down last week. Then he moved to Campbell River and commuted. But he couldn't make it Thursday, and there was no school. The ferry, Island Princess, bound for alert Bay and Beaver Cove, scheduled to sail at 3:45 p.m., was still in Sayward late at night because its cook, his food, and the passengers he was supposed to serve were all in the bus that was stranded. Community Programs Branch official Gordon Pynn had a visit with Mrs. Mutas and family when the flood stopped him from reaching a meeting he was to address in Sayward. And two men stayed here five hours waiting for the road to clear, before someone told them it wasn't the road to Gold River.

Washed-Out Span Wipes Out Classes

TOFINO—School was washed out for secondary students from here Thursday. They boarded the school bus, and the vehicle rumbled off for Ucluelet High School, 26 miles away. The bus was stopped six miles from its destination by a washout at Lost Shoe Creek. The bridge over the creek was gone. So around turned the bus, and back they came. The former bridge at Lost Shoe was dismantled recently to make room for a culvert, and a temporary log bridge was erected. It didn't take the rain strain. The road crews are fashioning a detour so cars can travel between Tofino and Ucluelet, and students can get back to their studies.

Strachan Urges Takeover Of B.C. Tel.

LADYSMITH—Opposition Leader Robert Strachan has made a takeover of the B.C. Telephone Company an issue in the Nov. 8 federal election.

He spoke here Thursday night in support of Colin Cameron, incumbent NDP candidate for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands. Mr. Strachan said he will present a brief to the Board of Transport Commissioners in Vancouver Monday, suggesting that the utility's charter be changed from a federal to a provincial one so the firm could be more easily taken over by B.C.

"During provincial elections in this province when public ownership of our telephone system is discussed, we are told that a federal franchise prevents the provincial government from such a takeover," he said.

"Now we are in a federal election and public ownership of the telephone systems of this country must be a federal election issue." The provincial NDP leader said he expects that if his party comes to power in Ottawa it would take over both B.C. Tel. and Bell Telephone Co. which operates in Quebec and Ontario.

"The figures I have indicate that public ownership of both the B.C. Telephone Company and the Bell Telephone Company in Quebec and Ontario would make it possible to bring about an immediate 25 per cent reduction in telephone costs to the consumer," he said.

"We know that the privately owned subsidiaries of the telephone companies who now supply telephone equipment are used to hide some of the profits

All-Candidate Forums

Are Socreds Opting Out?

DUNCAN—Organizers of all-candidate forums in Nanaimo riding are wondering if the Social Credit candidate has opted out of this type of electioneering.

Socred Lyle Wilkinson didn't show up for this week's all-candidate meeting at Lake Cowichan, and he has now informed Duncan Jaycees he will not be at the Nov. 2 forum in Duncan, either.

The reason given officially: prior commitments. But David Elise, president of Duncan Jaycees, said Mr. Wilkinson told him he did not want to appear at all-candidate meetings because: "They can be pretty rough and tumble."

Mr. Elise said the invitations to candidates were given two weeks ago, and at that time Mr. Wilkinson said he would attend.

Now, he has a "prior commitment."

But Mr. Elise also quoted the Socred candidate as telling him: "Forums are not much advantage to fellows like me, but you have to go to them—unless you have something else to do."

Campaign manager Cyril Dawkin said his candidate has found something else to do.

Asked if Mr. Wilkinson was withdrawing from the meetings because he did not feel able to compete with other candidates, Mr. Dawkin chuckled and said, "Well, I gave you the answer. He has a previous engagement."

Mr. Dawkin said his party will not allow other people to "run our campaign."

He said the Jaycees are wrong in charging a $25 fee for candidates to enter the forum.

He said this could set a precedent which would be repeated in all-candidate forums all over the country.

But Mr. Elise said the Jaycees are non-profit organization, and they have spent money for radio, newspaper and sound-truck advertising to get a good turnout.

Mr. Dawkin said the Jaycees should have written letters to the candidates rather than telephoning them.

Green—National Unity. Matthews—Good Government. Cameron—Canada's Survival as a Nation.

OBSTRUCTION Mr. Cameron said "the Liberals say they met with obstruction in their proposed legislation, but it was not irresponsible obstruction."

"The cry for a majority government comes very strangely. What do they want to do that they can't get through without a majority government?"

HIDING SOMETHING? "Maybe Mr. Pearson and his party have something in mind, which they aren't telling anybody."

Mr. Greer said, "Despite the best efforts of the government whose duty it is to introduce legislation and program its progress through the House, the people of Canada feel that to consume 33 days in the House and 45 days in committee discussing the flag issue, to consume 14 days in talking about the non-political redistribution bill, to consume 80 days to consider estimates and supply and to absorb 30 sitting days to consider interim supply measures seems like a waste of time, energy and money."

CANADA FIRST Walter Matthews said the building of Canada should come before Canadian assistance to other countries.

He said "Canadians have a right to know what parliament is doing. There should be no secret deals, and the people should be able to look into the future."

SEEK STRENGTH "It is all very well to help other countries, but Canada should come first. When Canada is strong, she will be better able to help other countries."

"Our senior citizens, veterans and retarded children should be helped first within our own country."

Arrival date of the animal shelter from Metchoin is not decided, but a caretaker at the vacant kennels indicated this will certainly be the new home of the shelter.

"Some people here feel the kennels (when occupied) would be a nuisance," commented

Henry Norie, operator of a Campbell River logging concern, who lives near the site.

"I do not know whether or not that will be the case, but one must consider what the present neighbors think of them."

MINIMIZE WORK Mr. Norie commented "If they should antagonize the neighbors around here it would minimize their good work."

"If the animals should become a public nuisance, pressure would be put on the authorities to curb it. We do not welcome nuisance into this area."

NO LOUD NOISE But he said he visited the present shelter at Metchoin and "at that particular time I could not hear any loud noise."

Mr. Norie suggested Mother Cecilia would have made a better move if she had taken the animal shelter to an unpopulated area.

Mr. Norie said his property near Elmhurst Kennels has been for sale for the past six months, and he hopes location of the shelter nearby will not affect the sale.

ACRES OF TREES To the west of the buildings, acres of trees round out the property.

Asking price for the entire 13-acre property including two houses and kennels was $35,000, according to owner Terry Hammond of Vancouver.

Mr. Hammond said the property had been up for sale for the past year.

QUITE HAPPY Two neighbors living with in a stone's throw of the shelter, R. R. Bain and Miss E. M. Elliott, are quite happy to have the Shepherd Shelter move here.

Scottish-born Mr. Bain and his wife have been living at their immaculate property for the past 14 years, and both are animal lovers.

So is next-door neighbor Miss Elliott.

Mr. Bain, a retired businessman from Vancouver, said "I think it is a wonderful idea to care for abandoned animals, and we certainly are not opposed to the shelter."

Mr. and Mrs. Bain and Miss Elliott display their fondness for animals by providing food and shelter for wild creatures.

Neighbors Cautious

Arrival date of the animal shelter from Metchoin is not decided, but a caretaker at the vacant kennels indicated this will certainly be the new home of the shelter.

"Some people here feel the kennels (when occupied) would be a nuisance," commented

Henry Norie, operator of a Campbell River logging concern, who lives near the site.

"I do not know whether or not that will be the case, but one must consider what the present neighbors think of them."

(Some Metchoin residents complained about the noise from the Good Shepherd shelter).

MINIMIZE WORK Mr. Norie commented "If they should antagonize the neighbors around here it would minimize their good work."

"If the animals should become a public nuisance, pressure would be put on the authorities to curb it. We do not welcome nuisance into this area."

NO LOUD NOISE But he said he visited the present shelter at Metchoin and "at that particular time I could not hear any loud noise."

Mr. Norie suggested Mother Cecilia would have made a better move if she had taken the animal shelter to an unpopulated area.

Mr. Norie said his property near Elmhurst Kennels has been for sale for the past six months, and he hopes location of the shelter nearby will not affect the sale.

The kennels are set in splendor of the fall colors, and to the east the calm waters of Mill Bay drift into the autumn haze below.

ACRES OF TREES To the west of the buildings, acres of trees round out the property.

Asking price for the entire 13-acre property including two houses and kennels was $35,000, according to owner Terry Hammond of Vancouver.

Mr. Hammond said the property had been up for sale for the past year.

QUITE HAPPY Two neighbors living with in a stone's throw of the shelter, R. R. Bain and Miss E. M. Elliott, are quite happy to have the Shepherd Shelter move here.

Scottish-born Mr. Bain and his wife have been living at their immaculate property for the past 14 years, and both are animal lovers.

Freighter Breaking Up Heavy Winds Delay Ship Rescue

PLYMOUTH, England (AP)—The British ship Londoner reached the crippled 7,184-ton Liberian vessel Tradeways II early today, but reported she was unable to lower lifeboats to help.

The Londoner radioed that because of 35-knot winds, she would wait for daylight before beginning operations. The report said men were sighted on the deck of the stricken Montreal-bound ship and one of the Tradeways's lifeboats was in the water.

The 441-foot Liberian ship radioed Thursday night she was taking water and breaking up 700 miles off Land's End. There was no word of how many men were aboard.

The RAF coastal command here said a plane was ready at Ballykelly, Northern Ireland, to fly to the Tradeways if needed. The freighter, formerly known as the Amilla, was en route from Antwerp, Belgium, to Montreal.

City Tug Fighting Huge Seas, Gales

A distress message from a Greek freighter has sent the Victoria-based tug Sudbury II off on a rescue mission.

Last given position of the propellerless freighter Ekaterini G. was 2,400 miles west of Cape Flattery, and roughly half way between Adak in the Aleutians and Midway Island.

Huge seas and gale winds were reported by both Sudbury II and an Adak-based navy tug which has a line aboard the freighter and is standing by.

The Sudbury's captain, late Thursday, reported running into a heavy northeast swell and a strong northeast wind slowly increasing.

The Ekaterini G. was on her way to Vancouver in ballast to pick up a load of wheat when high seas lifted her too high too often, and she threw her propeller.

RECORD TOW
World record salvage tow of 3,400 miles was set a few years ago by Island Tug's Sudbury I, after the freighter Makedonia threw her propeller.

Propeller-towing time in the northern Pacific usually extends through the gale seasons from September to March and an 18-hour tow.

Never Will Be

No Deals Says John D

By RON COLLISTER
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

BROCKVILLE, Ont. — Conservative leader John Diefenbaker bombed and buried persistent speculation that a "deal" on the leadership caused the avalanche of pre-election unity in the party.

"There were no deals," he told a crowd of 1,200 here. "There never will be as long as I am leader of the party."

RESIGNATION

Bert Leboe, Social Credit candidate in Cariboo constituency, said Thursday that Conservative leader Diefenbaker has submitted his resignation, dated July, 1967, to the Conservative party.

"The only reason former Conservative cabinet ministers are returning to the Conservative fold is to get another crack at the leadership," he told a Castor, Alta., audience.

HONEST DIFFERENCES

Talking freely about the troubles that broke up his cabinet early in 1963, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"We were disgusted over the nuclear deal. Honest men have

CRISIS MIXUP IRKS ALBERNI

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — A frantic mother dialed "O" for operator to call out the inhalator for her one-month-old son, and Nanaimo fire department rushed to answer the call.

The emergency was in Port Alberni.

The baby was dead when it was finally rushed to West Coast General Hospital by the mother, Wednesday night.

Hammer

Dead is Wayne Amede Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Frank, 902 Bruce, Port Alberni.

With direct distance dialing there is no longer a telephone operator in the Alberni.

When Mrs. Frank dialed "O" she didn't realize she was speaking to an operator in Nanaimo.

AFRAID OF THIS

Since there is a Bruce Street in Nanaimo, the operator called out the Nanaimo inhalator. "Ever since they took the operators out of Port Alberni I've been afraid some emergency like this might come up," said Mayor Les Hammer.

'WE'D BE CUT OFF'

"What would happen if we had another tidal wave, and the lines to Nanaimo were down?" asked the mayor. "We would be completely cut off."

Fire chief Maurice Smith said "We will not know until a post-mortem whether our department could have saved the child, had we known about it."

He said the emergency system in the valley is inadequate.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

"The system here might be all right for a village of 3,000, but it's just not good enough for an area where close to 20,000 are concerned," he said.

Emergency numbers are different in Alberni, Port Alberni, and Cherry Creek.

The fire chief said he has tried to impress Port Alberni

Isolated Village Rides Out Flood

KINGCOME INLET, B.C. (CP)—Late reports are "optimistic" evacuation of this remote logging village hit by flooding may not be necessary.

"We have every reason to believe that flooding is on the wane," Attorney-General Bonner said Thursday night.

"There appears to be no present need for evacuation."

HEAVY RAINS

The Kingcome River, swollen by near torrential rains that hit the coastal region 220 miles northwest of Vancouver, rampaged over its banks at the head of the long inlet.

Muddy water swirled past houses, most built on stilts along the riverbank, and rose above floors.

100 PEOPLE

Mr. Bonner said about 100 persons live in the village.

He said he did not want to rely on sketchy reports and had requested some seaborne craft to remain in the vicinity until scene overnight.

COULD BE PROBLEM

He said there "could be a problem" if there was a heavy rain overnight.

"An RCMP plane is standing by to pass over the area at first light," he said.

RCMP patrol boats and the Canadian Coast Guard vessel Ready were proceeding to the scene overnight.

Two large barges were being towed into the inlet and were expected to be near the community by daylight.

Mr. Bonner said the barges were capable of complete evacuation then if it was necessary.

'True Revolutionaries'

Castro's Objective: Distill Population

MIAMI (UPI)—Premier Fidel Castro says he is letting Cubans leave the island because he wants to distill Cuba's population to "true revolutionaries, true socialists, true communists."

Castro, in a surprise speech marking Cuba's first national track and field games Thursday, reiterated his "open door" policy for Cuban refugees first proclaimed Sept. 28.

"Again we say that the policy of this government is that anyone who does not wish to live here can leave," said Castro, whose speech was monitored in Miami.

EXPULSION ONE

"We are expelling no one, for we expel no one born in this land, but we are giving facilities to all those who do not wish to live here."

"We are doing this because we want to create a society of men and women who are true revolutionaries, true socialists, true communists," said Castro.

'Old man of sea' arrives in Florida

Biggest Day Yet In Cuban Exodus

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—A parade of small boats pouring out of Cuba brought more than 300 refugees across the gulfstream to freedom today, among them a 6-day-old boy and a wizened "old man of the sea."

It was the heaviest influx on any one day since the do-it-yourself exodus began with the first boat arrival two weeks ago in response to Castro's Sept. 28 announcement of an "Open Door" policy to rid his island of discontented persons.

The weather-beaten 92-year-old, Anselmo Hernandez, claims he was the fisherman who inspired the Pulitzer Prize novel "The Old Man and the Sea," written by the late Ernest Hemingway. Grizzled Anselmo said he met Hemingway 30 years ago, adding they had remained good friends until the author's death.

Refugees told of preparations at Varadero, which has become a refugee embarkation point, for a mass airlift of emigrants.
